Senate Hears U. S. Allies Criticized on Cooperation

Three Members Back From World Tour Speak Highly of Nation's Military

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

In its first secret session since the war began the Senate yesterday heard encouraging reports of American military competence, but disturbing charges of waste, diplomatic ineptitude and lack of cooperation on the part of this Nation's allies.

High points of the talks given by Senators Russell (Democrat) of Georgia, Mead (Democrat) of New York, and Lodge (Republican) of Massachusetts, were these:

1. An estimate from three of America's highest naval and military leaders that one million American casualties could be avoided if Russia granted Pacific Coast bases from which to bomb Japan. Conquest of the coast of China, now in Japanese hands, and establishment of bases there is the only other alternative, Senators were told.

2. In India, the British have a huge reserve of troops, mostly native, under arms (figures were given but regarded as confidential) which is not being use in the prosecution of the war.

3. Building of the Burma Road is a useless extravagance, the Senate was informed. The United States is spending millions to build one end while Japanese are rushing to complete the other. Military men believe that only a trickle of supplies could get over the road even if it were uncontested.

4. America is storing up endless grief by its own "silly propaganda abroad indicating that this Nation will feed and clothe the world in the peace to come. The returning Senators warned the task would be impossible for this country, while failure to complete it in the face of our own propaganda would engender enmity.

5. Lodge discussed the problem of such states as the Dutch East Indies, which would need to be defended in the future. He posed the question of whether they would fall into British or Dutch hands, or whether the Javanese should be allowed to assume control.

6. Winning the war is only the beginning. Chaos in Europe caused by fighting between Communists and Fascists, already said to be slowing up operations in Italy, is sure to follow.

7. The Germans may be able to hold the Brenner Pass in North ern Italy for more than two months.

Yanks' Eighth Inning Rally Beats Cards, 6-2

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 7.—The Yankees seized on the weaknesses of a nervous Cardinal defense tha collapsed behind Alpha Brazle, luckless, red-headed rookie, today and compounded a five-run eighth inning to win the third World Series game, 6 to 2.

In defeat, Brazle heard the cheers of the largest crowd in World Series history as he took the long walk toward the showers, a bowed figure, who had held the Yankees to three hits for seven innings and then fell victim to the shoddy play behind him.

A whopping mob of 69,990 in the stadium saw the Yankees strike quickly and forcefully to overcome the Cardinals' 2-1 lead in the eighth after the Cardinals committed their third and fourth errors of the game behind Brazle.

Rookie Bill Johnson, Yankee third baseman, struck the climax blow—a three bagger with the bases full that moved three runs home and gave the Yankees a 2-1 edge at the end of three games.

Until that moment, young Brazle was winning his duel with Hank Borowy. The Only Yankee run to that point was not his fault. That run was unearned, stemming from a fumble by Whitey Kurowski in the fourth, and it was Third Baseman Kurowski who fouled up matters for Brazle in the eighth.

Brazle, a skinny southpaw with a delivery reminiscent of Carl Hubbell, and the similarity accented by his low-hanging pants, saw his 2-1 lead begin to waste away at the beginning of the eigth when Lindell singled to center and raced to second base on Harry Walker's fumble of the ball.

Now the Yankees, with the tying run on second and none out, could play it cagily, and they sent in George Stirnweiss to bat for Borowy with orders to sacrifice. He bunted and First Baseman Ray Sanders scooped the ball up and rifled it to Kurowski at third for an easy play on Lindell. But Kurowski dropped the ball for an error, Lindell was safe, and Brazle was now in deep trouble.

Lindell, incidentally, was running for keeps on his dash into third base and ploughed into Kurowski unceremoniously to jolt the ball out of his glove.

Brazle went back to work in his spot and disposed of Tuck Stainback on a fly ball to Litwhiler

Vinson Sees Inflation Aid In Sales Levy

Issues Warnings as More Attacks Hit 10 Billion Tax Plan

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Economic Stabilization Director Vinson warned yesterday that a sales tax would break the line against inflation, while the Administration's 10-billion pay-as-we-fight revenue program, already near the vanishing point at the Capitol, was subjected to new attacks.

Vinson, testifying before the House Ways and Means Committee for the second day, said that the general retail sales levy favored by some members would make it impossible to hold the line against inflation. Between a 10 per cent rise in the cost of living, however, and a 10 per cent sales tax, he said he would take the latter.

Earlier he had declared Administration plans now aim at rolling back the cost of living another 2 per cent, while a general sales tax automatically would boost the level 8 per cent.

Celler Fights Liquor Levy

Attacks on the Administration revenue plans were aimed by Representative Celler (Democrat) of New York, who protested the proposed increased liquor excises, and CIO President Murray, who criticized the plan to reduce the exemption for married persons from $1200 to $1100 and for dependents from $350 to $300.

Representative Celler said the recommended increase from $6 to $10 a gallon in Federal liquor levies would revive bootlegging "on a huge scale" without adding any revenue to the Treasury.

Murray, asking to be heard on the tax program, wrote Ways and Means Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina that "it would be incorrect to make any further cut in the income tax

Rally Stresses Brotherhood In War Fund

$4,800,000 Appeal Made at Luncheon Of Business Group

"Your dollars will never do more useful work, will never be more appreciated, than when you give them to the Community War Fund."

This appeal—for $4,800,000 in gifts from Washington pocketbooks for our home needy, our soldiers and our allies—was made yesterday by Raymond Clapper, columnist and war correspondent, at a joint luncheon of the fund's Service Clubs Committee in the Mayflower Hotel.

Clapper, who was with the Seventh Army in Palermo and went on the first bombing mission over Rome, described another event he had witnessed in Europe—a terrifyingly vivid scene out of Germany exactly six years ago. After describing the stern lines of the Elite Guard, the goose-stepping of "the little man in the raincoat" and the threatening words he loosed on his audiences, Clapper explained that it had been a "give-to-the-poor" rally, and contrasted the method with that of the appeal meeting yesterday.

"You would understand exactly what your contribution to the Community War uFnd will mean if you went into any war zone," Clapper asserted as he cited recreation as "most needed" for the military services here and abroad.

Representing the United Nations, whose suffering peoples are also aided by fund contributions, Sir Gerald Campbell, special assistant to Lord Halifax, said: "Thank you, again and again, on the behalf of all your allies for what you have done ever since you realized the shock of man's inhumanity to man."

He added: "You are strengthening physically and mentally the wounds of the suffering."

Citing the brotherhood theme of the campaign, Campbell asserted:

Pupils Now on Shifts

Two District Schools Facing New Problem of Overcrowding

When new housing developments open in Southeast and Southwest Washington, Florence Painter, principal at Stanton and XPatterson schools, both now operating on three-hour shifts, wonders where children living in those homes will study.

Some of the children go from 9:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., and others from 12:30 to 3:30 p. m. The shift system was used rather widely in Washington about 15 years ago and hsa been necessary more recently at Eastern and Anacostia High Schools. Several other elementary schools also operate in shifts.

Recommendations to ease overcrowding at Patterson, Chesapeake st. and Nichols ave. sw., have been forward to the Commissioners by the Board of Education, but no new facilities are expected for months.

The recommendation calls for a temporary building to be built on a permanent site of the Patterson School. The site must be bought with deficiency appropriations, and although the green light is said already to have been given by the Commissioners, school officials think it unlikely congressional action and construction can be effected for several months.

Lanham Act funds could be obtained for an immediate addition to the Chesapeage st. site, but the school is on the beam of a Bolling Field plane runway. Planes almost scrape the roof as they rise over the hill.

Army officials say the site is dangerous. One plane accident might injure a hundred children.

No preparations are being made to care for an anticipated overflow at Stanton School, 5 miles away, at Alabama ave., and Good Hope rd. se.

Children from about 10 new housing developments now use the eight-room Patterson temporary, and more than 2000 family units being built in the area will open soon to bring more children to the neighborhood, according to Miss

Revised Version

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

House leaders yesterday gave the green arrow to legislation increasing benefits to service dependents, divorcing these from the Senate-passed father draft bill, and according the benefits measure first call.

Out of the House Military Committee was hurried a revised version of the dependency bill carrying allowances for service children only slightly below those fixed by the Senate in the still pending draft legislation.

Final House passage was slated for Wednesday, ahead of House consideration of the bill sifting industrial deferments. Chairman Andrew J. May of the Military Committee said the draft bill will be tightened to speed the call of all possible non-fathers ahead of parents, and will follow the dependency bill to House passage.

As reported by the House group yesterday, the benefits legislation will carry some $650,000,000 annually in increased allowances for servicemen's families over the present estimated billion dollar cost. This was still some $350,000,000 less generous than the Senate draft bill amendment, and a House fight was promised to at least match the Senate's ante.

Less Generous Than Senate

For the first child of all grades of enlisted men, the House measure provided $25, against $30 proposed by the Senate, and $12 allowed in present law. Both continue the present $50 monthly for the wife, and provide $20 for the second child (compared with $10 under the present law). For the third child, and each additional child, the House measure proposes $15, against $20 offered by the Senate. The House figures thus indicate the very minimum that will be voted to ease hardships of families of inducted fathers.

To illustrate, a service wife with one child can expect to receive at least $75 a month; wife with two children, at least $95; wife with three children, at least $110, etc. To meet part of the cost, $22 of the total check to such primary dependents would continue to come from the serviceman's pay, and the Government would pay the rest.

Many Barges Sunk

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific (Friday), Oct. 8.—Starving and short of ammunition, the Japanese apparently have abandoned their principal air base of Vila and, at considerable cost in lives and ships, have fled the entire southern half of Kolombangara Island in the Solomons, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today. Evacuation of the rest of the island is in progress.

"Cutting of supply lines supporting Vila, accomplished several weeks ago by our surprise occupation of Vella Lavella to the north, thus outflanking all sea supply routes, has forced the enemy to attempt to evacuate his troops from Kolombangara," a communique said.

"Vila and the southern part of the island apparently already have been abandoned by troops moving toward the northern shores.

Evacuation Progressing

"For several nights by barge and small warship, the attempt at evacuation has been progressing. Many barges have been sunk with great loss of enemy life and some of his troops undoubtedly escaped to safety. The enemy's struggle to evacuate continues."

Vila, which is across the Kula Gulf from American-won New Georgia, and has undergone artillery shelling from American forces on nearby Arundel, once garrisoned an estimated 10,000 men.

Over a wide area, Allied planes struck at enemy shipping. The communique reported at least 27 small Japanese boats, ranging from barges to cargo ships, sunk and at least 12 enemy planes destroyed.

The enemy's Vila garrison has been in an untenable position since the Americans drove the Japanese from New Georgia, and occupied Vella Lavella, thus putting forces north and suth of Kolombangara.

The Japanese have paid heavily in lives lost in Allied bombings, headquarters said.

War Order Termination Plan Offered for Congress Action

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

A four-point program to assure orderly termination of war contracts was offered for congressional action yesterday by the Committee for Economic Development, an independent organization reflecting the views of some of America's top businessmen.

Regarded as a major contribution to current efforts toward creating a healthy balance between war production and eventual war demobilization, the committee's formal statement stressed that heedless unemployment and dislocation of business will occur without a program for prompt and equitable settlement of contracts.

At present, the committee pointed out, there are 100,000 prime war contracts and several times as many subcontracts, totaling about 60 to 75 billion dollars, with inventories from 10 to 15 billion dollars.

Action now, the committee emphasized, will avert the situation of the last war when the Government terminated about 32,000 separate war contracts, with an aggregate uncompleted value of about five billion dollars. Despite strenuous efforts, some 7000 of these contracts remained unsettled a year after the armistice, about 800 claims found their way to the courts, and a few cases were not settled more than 20 years after the armistice.

To meet this war's contract settlement problem which is of "tremendous proportions," the committee asked Congress to consider the following four-point program:

1. Creation by Congress of a governmental board with broad powers to establish uniform and simplified policies for the guidance of the several war agencies in the settlement of terminated contracts

2. Delegation of clear-cut authority to the contracting agencies to make final settlements with contractors within the framework of policies and procedures established by the contract settlement board.

3. Enaction of legislation which will establish a clear and simple avenue to the courts for all contractors, and provide adequate legal machinery for expeditious handling of disputes.

4. Established machinery for mandatory loans to contractors and subcontractors from the Government in amounts equal to a substantial proportion of proper settlement claims.

"None of the fundamentals outlined above can be achieved with-

Great Battle Shaping Up

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 7.—The Germans have rushed an armored division to the Adriatic coast and have opened a bitter battle against the British Eighth Army, ending their 300-mile retreat and finally taking a stand against the advancing Allies along a 125-mile front across Italy.

After a slow withdrawal since the Allies first invaded the Italian mainland with the landing of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army at Reggio Calabria September 3, the German army apparently has intrenched itself for a strong stand and is determined to make the United Nations pay a dear price for their next major objective, Rome.

(Jean Herold Paquis, military commentator on the German-controlled Paris radio, broadcast that Montgomery was bringing up American units on the eastern shores of Italy. These units, Paquis said, were not taking part in the present fighting and might be "the first elements for an Allied operation aimed at the Balkans."

(A Reuters dispatch from Stockholm yesterday said the United States Seventh Army was in Italy, probably massing to strike at the Balkans.)

The Germans were disclosed at Allied headquarters today to be rushing the fortification of the Volturno River line north of Naples against Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's American Fifth Army, which reported continued dogged progress despite extensive Nazi demolitions and a heavy rain which left the battlefield soggy.

Scores Killed In Naples by Delayed Mine

By Noel Monks
Representing the Combined British Press Distributed by the Associated Press

Naples, Oct. 7.—One of the war's greatest atrocities was perpetrated against the Neapolitans by the Germans today when a delayed action mine containing several hundred tons of high explosive, planted in the basement of the postoffice building, went off.

Scores of Italian civilians, including many women and children, were blown to pieces as the whole pavement in the Via Armondo Diaz was flung into the air.

[The International News Service staff correspondent reported that Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark escaped almost certain death in another explosion by only 90 minutes during his formal entry into captured Naples. A German land mine, set to explode long after the German evacuation, ripped the Via Carraciolo, on the Naples waterfront, an hour and a half after the commander of the Allied Fifth Army rode down the street.]

Death Strikes Block Away

Virtually every person on the ground floor of the postoffice was killed as well as many civilians walking in the street a block away. People also were killed in adjoining buildings.

The explosion occurred at one of the busiest times of the day, when hundreds of Neapolitans were visiting the postoffice and endeavoring to communicate with their relatives in districts occupied by the Allies.

Some soldiers were included among the dead.

The postoffice was the only public building left intact by the Germans when they left a week ago.

British and American Red Cross services on the scene worked at high pressure for several hours.

One appalling aspect was the number of children killed. At one moment they were playing in the

London Raid Heaviest in 2-Year Period

Residential Areas Bombed; RAF Out In Force Over Europe

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), Oct. 8.—The German air force made its heaviest and longest raid on London and other sections of southeast England in two years shortly after dark last night when great forces of RAF bombers winged out over the Channel for new attacks against the continent.

The roar of the British bomber armada synchronized with the staccato blasts of the antiaircraft barrage. Ground gunners knocked down at least two of the fairly large number of enemy raiders, one in flames in London itself, which dashed over the capital beneath the outbound bombers.

Not since the night of May 5, 1941, had the Nazi air force launched a comparable attack. There were both casualties and property damage in London, East Anglia and other districts, but neither was as extensive as the toll caused almost nightly two years ago.

The raid on London began early. Huge searchlights spotted the enemy planes, then picked up bigger British bombers flying higher. The ground barrage ceased as British night fighters went up, but resumed about 30 minutes later.

Many bombs fell in crowded residential areas and some direct hits were scored on residences.

A southeast coast correspondent reported the RAF bomber procession continued for more than 3 hours across the coast en route to the Continent.

Then almost all of the Continent's radios left the air and alerts were sounded in Switzerland.

Using a puny imitation of Allied diversified bombing tactics, the Germans chose scattered targets, but only a few attackers managed to reach London and most of the

Espil May Be Foreign Minister

Argentina Names New Envoy Here, Described as Pro-Allied

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, Oct. 7.—Adrian C. Escobar, former Argentine Ambassador to Brazil and Spain, has been named Ambassador to Washington, succeeding Felipe A. Espil, the foreign office announced tonight.

The announcement said Argentina had been advised already by Washington that the appointment of Escobar would be acceptable.

Escobar was replaced as Ambassador to Brazil last August 14 by Gen. Arturo Rawson, leader of the June 4 revolt which overthrew the government of President Ramon S. Castillo.

Escobar, who is 62, was described by friends as thoroughly democratic and pro-Allied. He is a lawyer by profession and had long experience in political posts before entering the diplomatic field. He is a former National Deputy, a former Director of Posts and Telegraph, and was a delegate to the Pan-American Conference at Lima in 1938. He was named Ambassador to Spain in 1940.

Official sources withheld comment on the significance of Espil's recall. Asked whether there was any possibility Espil might be named Foreign Minister, an authorized source said, "Let's wait until he gets here and see what happens."

Escobar said in an interview that "my appointment as Ambassador to the United States causes me a great deal of satisfaction," adding, "I hope in this post to aid in the close collaboration of the two peoples and accomplish fruitful work in strengthening the ties which unite them."

[Segundo Storni resigned as Agentine Foreign Minister as a result of Secretary of State Hull's blunt rejection of his recent plea for lend-lease aid from the United States. Secretary Hull pointedly declared that Argentina could expect no help from this country while she continued to maintain relations with the Axis and provide a haven for Axis plotters.

Soviets Storm Across River Defenses at Three Places

Russians Also Gain In Northwest Push, Virtually Erase Foe's Caucasus Foothold

James M. Long
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Friday), Oct. 8.—The Red army has cracked the vaunted German Dnieper River line to establish three west bank bridgeheads above and below Kiev, has driven two dangerous wedges through the Leningrad-Vitebsk Front, and has swept the Germans out of the Caucasus in a smashing renewal of its great 1943 offensive, Moscow announced early today.

Smoothly merging their summer drive into an even more widespread autumn offensive threatening larger disasters for the enemy, Russian troops crossed the Dnieper to establish the three bridgeheads despite furious German counterattacks and now are extending them "step by step," a Soviet communique said.

All German counterattacks were "repulsed with heavy losses," Moscow said of the drive that threatens to trap hundreds of thousands of Germans in the river loop and force another German withdrawal —this time into Rumania and Poland.

8000 Germans Fall

More than 8000 Germans fell in two days' bitter fighting at one bridgehead, the communique said, as the Germans strove "at all costs to hold up the Soviet advance."

Attacking now along a 2000-mile front instead of the previous 800-mile area, the Russians also captured Nevel in an offensive 60 miles above Vitebsk, White Russia, and punched out a 9-mile gain southeast of Leningrad on the long-dormant Volkhov front.

Nevel can serve the Russians as a springboard for a plunge toward Latvia, 70 miles to the west. The communique also pointed out that the Germans had fortified the city and surrounding area for two years.

In the Caucasus the Russians had reached the "mopping up" stage after toppling the last German strongholds on the Taman Peninsula, including Taman (Staro-Tamanskaya), to liberate that area. The communique said Soviet airmen were sinking fleeing German troops by the boatload in the narrow Kerch Strait between the Caucasus and the Crimea, while Soviet ground troops killed or captured enemy remnants unable to flee.

Airmen Clear Path

But the formidable engineering and fighting feat in crossing the Dnieper was the Soviet military highlight.

The tone of the Moscow communique and the fact it was not issued until several days after Berlin first had reported Russian crossing attempts indicated the Russians now were across the

Surprise Move Readies Bill to Admit Chinese

In a surprise move yesterday the House Committee on Immigration voted 8 to 4 in executive session to report favorably a bill to repeal Chinese exclusion acts, and allow Chinese immigration to this country on a quota basis.

Leader of the opposition to placing the Chinese on a quota basis, Representative Allen (Democrat) of Louisana, was not present at yesterday's executive session and his proxy, along with several others, was reported not to have been voted.

The measure, on which the House may act next week, would repeal the Chinese exclusion acts dating back to 1882, place the Chinese on a quota basis under the Immigration Act of 1924, allowing approximately 105 to enter the United States annually and amend naturalization laws to allow the Chinese citizenship.

Canny Fighter Is Yugoslavs' War Leader

(This is another story from the Yugoslav Front by the first American correspondent to enter that territory since the German conquest in the spring of 1041.)

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

At a Partisan Brigade Headquarters in Yugoslavia, Oct. 3 (Delayed). There's red magic in the name "Drug Tito" in Yugoslavia today.

Drug Tito—Comrade Tito—is marshal of the National Liberation Army and the Partisan Free Corps, which are battling Germany and the Quisling governments in Zagreb and Belgrade for control of at least two-thirds of Yugoslavia. He is spokesman for Partisan Yugoslavia. He is organizer of a political system which administers large reconquered areas of the mountains, the highlands and the coast. He is a past master of guerilla warfare.

Of the hundreds of thousands of Yugoslav youths now making war on Germany only a handful ever have seen their aloof, inscrutable chief.

This morning, sitting in an untidy office that once belonged to the commander of the Italian occupation forces, I talked with a deputy commander of a south Dalmatian Partisan brigade, who said that only two months ago he saw and spoke with Drug Tito at Partisan supreme headquarters in the granite-walled fastness of Bosnia.

A peacetime taxicab driver in Split and a Partisan volunteer from the outset of the war of liberation, my informant wore a captured Italian uniform. His rank was denoted by three vertical bars of red felt on his sleeve, surmounted by a red star.

We breakfasted from a plate of purple and yellow skinned grapes and the Partisan officer, his beard already half gray at the age of 32, answered my questions with apparent frankness. This is what he said:

"Drug Tito is the son of a Croat laboring family of Orthodox Catholic faith. Once he worked in a metal shop. There he became acquainted with people who put him in touch with modern political and social ideas.

"During the Spanish civil war, Drug Tito volunteered to fight against the Fascist terror. He rose high in the command of Barcelona, which you remember was one of the republican strongholds that held out the longest. Afterward he studied in Russia; it may have been in the Comintern School, I don't know.

"He was in Yugoslavia when the Germans began the war against us. It was over quickly—hardly more than eight days. He started organizing the Partisans for resistance. In November, 1941, the Germans were making their second offensive in Yugoslavia and Drug Tito offered to put the Partisan forces under the combined command of Gen. Draja Mihailovic, who was a well trained Serbian general and had installed Chetnik troops in the mountains. Mihailovic refused.

"Drug Tito had given Mihailovic 7000 rifles. We needed those rifles later.

Good in Strategy

"Drug Tito is good in strategy and organization. The Communist Party was the only political party which continued to fight against the Fascists and through the Communist Party Drug Tito enlisted Partisans in all parts of Yugoslavia. Religion was no barrier. Our soldiers came from all creeds —Moslem, Jew, Roman and Orthodox Catholic.

"Here in south Dalmatia we Partisans are Croats, but there are 200,000 Partisans in Serbia, many thousands in Slovenia and around Trieste. Four Garibaldi brigades of Italian Partisans from the Monfalcone shipyards are fighting the German occupators. You can see the Partisan movement includes each race in Yugoslavia.

"Drug Tito offered collaboration to Dr. Vladko Macek, head of the Croat Peasant Party. When (Dr. Anton) Pavelic (leader of the Croatian federalists) came out of Italy and made himself poglavnik (fuehrer) at Zagreb, Macek issued a statement asking his followers to obey the new government's orders, but he appeared to avoid politics and stayed on his farm. Drug Tito sent a delegation to tell Macek two partisan brigades would fetch him from Ustashi territory. Macek refused. The next day German SS troops, Italians and Ustashi put a combined guard over Macek.

"Macek still appears to avoid politics, but we know he supported the conscription of the Bela Garda (White Guard) among his followers to fight against Russia on the east front. Possibly 2000 persons were conscripted, but many peasants were warned in time and escaped to the woods. The Bela Garda now stabs us in the back.

"Both Pavelic and (Field Marshal Milan) Nedic are rotten Fascists. Pavelic started the Ustashi terror which murdered 750,000 orthodox Serbs, Jews and Partisan sympathizers in Croatia. Nedic slaughtered Jews, Croatian Roman Catholics and Partisans.

"Now that final victory is near in Yugoslavia we know British and American military missions have conferred with Drug Tito at his headquarters. Soviet Russia, Britain and America are our allies. Under Drug Tito we are fighting for a free federated and democratic Yugoslavia.

"Maybe you will go the next time to Drug Tito's headquarters, yes? You will meet him yourself. He is broad, stocky and 56 years old. He wears a mustache but no beard. He is marshal of the Narodna Oslobodilacka Voiska (National Liberation Army) but he dresses in the simple Partisan uniform. He will give you the impression of hard muscle and a good brain."

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 7.—A Yuogslav-partisan broadcast reported in London tonight said Yugoslav guerilla fighters had thrown tanks into the battle for the Istain Peninsula, and destroyed ten German tanks and one German plane.

News of the victory, said to have occurred near Jedreska, was not included in the regular communique of the People's Liberation Army, but Yugoslavs here with partisan connections reported hearing the broadcast detailing the tank fight. Sixty-five German soldiers were said to have been killed while the Yugoslav forces lost four tanks.

Yugoslav sources in London were unable to say what type of tanks the partisans were using or where they were obtained.

A correspondent who entered Yugoslavia cabled Wednesday in a dispatch dated October 2 that "the partisans are fighting today without a single tank or plane." He said the Yugoslav forces were armed only with rifles and machine guns. However, heavy weapons might since have been smuggled ashore by an Allied ship or taken from the disarmed Italians.

The Yugoslav communique said the First Croat Brigade, which had captured Lussino Island, also seized a German tanker carrying nearly 24,000 gallons of oil. Several coastal batteries and a large amount of war material were said to have been taken.

More than 200 German officers were killed by guerilla bands operating along the Split-Inopsko and Travnik-Sarajevo railroads, the bulletin said.

The Germans declared they were mopping up the Istrian region. The Berlin radio, in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, said nearly 4000 of the opposing forces were killed and almost 5000 taken prisoner in five days. Several arms and ammunition depots belonging to former Italian garrisons were declared captured.

Sink 6 Nazi Ships

London, Oct. 7 (AP).—British submarines operating in the Mediterranean have sunk six German or German-controlled ships and damaged two others, the Admiralty announced today.

One submarine, the Admiralty added, penetrated the northern Aegean Sea to bombard the coastal town of Stratoni. Hits were scored on a factory and the pier was severly damaged.

Rome Demolitions Under Way; Area Near Vatican Intact

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—The Germans have begun demolitions in the hills east of Rome and are preparing to blow up strategic installations within Rome itself to delay the entry of the Allied armies into the city, NBC Correspondent Merrill Mueller reported in a broadcast from Italy tonight.

German wrecking crews are preparing to blast the bridges over the Tiber River where it runs through Rome, Mueller said, quoting an official adviser to Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio.

Mueller reported that thus far there were no signs the Nazis were preparing to demolish downtown Rome. He said these concessions probably were due to the proximity of Vatican City to central Rome and Nazi fears of Catholic uprisings should Vatican City be damaged.

quarters said the Germans were believed to be holding the Volturno line "in some strength."

On the Adriatic coast the Germans attacked the advancing British and Canadians of the Eighth Army with tanks and infantry in the Termoli area, and the first assaults were beaten off, today's Allied communique announced.

The line which the German high command has chosen as its new bastion of Hitler's fortress Europe is formed by the Volturno River, now swollen by rains in the coastal plain north of Naples; by the rugged Matese, Sannio and Frentani Mountains rising well over 6000 feet and reaching almost to the Adriatic shoreline, and by streams running from the highlands into the Adriatic.

(Secretary of War Stimson said in Washington that the Germans still were pouring troops into Italy and that their forces now probably number between 20 and 25 divisions—possibly 300,000 men.)

Skirts Phlegraen Fields

Clark's American Fifth Army, skirting around the Phlegraen Fields—a cratered region of extinct volcanos famed in antiquity—already has taken position in the Mazzoni Plain along the Tyrrhenian coast north of Naples and has attained the Lago di Patria, a marshy lake 10 miles south of the mouth of the Volturno.

Further information from the front today disclosed that the crossing of the Volturno by Fifth Army elements as reported at headquarters yesterday was only along the main tributary of the Volturno system, commonly known as the Calore River.

German defenses on the north banks of the Volturno across the plain from the mountains to the Tyrrhenian Sea are still intact.

The elements of the Fifth Army which have crossed the Calore constitute a threat to the German flank on the coastal plain.

On the eastern side of Italy's Apennine backbone, where General Montgomery's veterans are locked in battle, the Germans at some points are standing along the Biferno River, but the main fighting around Termoli is north of the river.

More Rivers to Cross

The Germans have, however, two other streams along the Adriatic on which to make stands in front of the port of Pescara, which is a sort of back door to Rome. These are the Trigno and Sangro Rivers.

Similarly, should the Fifth Army dislodge the Germans from the Volturno on the western coastal plain, there are other natural defenses between there and Rome, notably the Garigliano and Liri Rivers and the Aurunci, Ausoni and Lepini Mountains.

German efforts to mass and supply a major force for the first big showdown fight against the Eighth Army on the Adriatic end of the front was complicated by the vulnerability of their lines of communication. The coastal railway lies close to the sea and thus is exposed to bombardment by warships as well as being an easy target for air attack.

The British destroyers Jervis and Offa pumped shells pointblank at this communication link yesterday.

Nazis Report Bitter Fighting

(The German communique said "bitter fighting" was in progress in the Termoli area, and that repeated Allied infantry and tank attacks on the Volturno River had been repulsed, principally by counterattacks. In the mountainous center it said German forces were "slowly withdrawing toward the northwest" after repelling strong Allied attacks.)

A headquarters communique said merely that "the Fifth Army has made further progress and is working forward to the line of the River Volturno. The Eighth Army positions in the Termoli area have been further reinforced and an enemy attack along the coastal road made by infantry and tanks was repulsed."

Radio France in Algiers declared that the Fifth Army was only 3 miles from Capua, where the Germans were expected to make a strong stand. All the German forces holding the present line across Italy were disclosed to be part of the Nazi Tenth Army, which has been entrusted with the defense of all central and northern Italy.

street. In the next they were mere ribbons of flesh.

I visited the scene within a few minutes of the explosion and counted the torn bodies of 15 children. A woman walking round the corner of the Via Roma, 150 yards from the postoffice, had her head blown off.

The reaction of the Neapolitans was one of fierce resentment against the Germans and hundreds worked themselves into hysteria calling for vengeance.

Allied Party Is Consulting With Badoglio

By the Associated Press

Somewhere in Southern Italy, Oct. 1 (Delayed).—Since September 13 an Allied military mission has been at the headquarters of Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio in close collaboration with the Italian government.

The mission is headed by British Lieut. Gen. Frank Noel Mason MacFarlane, governor and commander in chief of Malta, who is acting as the personal representative of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander in chief in the Mediterranean.

Political aspects of the Italian situation are clearing slowly. The temporary regime is working in collaboration with the Allies.

The desire of King Vittorio Emmanuele and Badoglio to widen the present government and include other non-Fascist Italian elements will be facilitated when the government eventually returns to Rome. At present it functions in southern Italy, its exact location still being a military secret.

War Sidelights

Tojo Warns Allied Moves Are Intense

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—A Tokyo broadcast reported today by the Office of War Information quoted Premier Hideki Tojo as telling 240 newly-appointed Japanese government officials that the Allied offensive had "gained in intensity."

"As the government officials of his majesty the Emperor," said Tojo, "from this day on your responsibility is truly enormous. Should you take even one false step, the result will be harming not only yourself but blemishing the virtue of his imperial majesty the Emperor."

Greeks Still Starving

London, Oct. 7 (AP).—George Extinaris, former Greek cabinet member, said today that children of northern provinces in Greece were fighting the dogs for scraps of food, and predicted an even more appalling famine this winter.

Extinaris, who escaped from Greece in July, told a press conference that in the five months from October, 1941, through February of 1942 the death rate was six and a half time normal in Athens, and starving men dropped dead in the streets.

Jap Victory Monuments

Melbourne, Oct. 7 (AP).—The Japanese are putting Australian war prisoners to work building victory monuments 288 feet high near the Ford factory on Singapore Island, it was revealed today in a letter from a native Indian army officer.

502 Axis Planes Destroyed

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 7 (AP).—The count of destroyed Axis airplanes found on airfields in Italy by the Allied forces has reached 502, Allied air headquarters said today.

Italian Railway Road Junction Blasted by Yanks

By Graham Hovey
International News Service Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Oct. 7.—American Flying Fortresses were revealed today to have flown 1200 round trip miles from African bases to strike a shattering blow at the railway junction of Mestre, 5 miles northwest of Venice.

The giant four-engine planes blanketed the target area with bombs Wednesday despite the stubborn opposition of 30 enemy fighters. An undisclosed number of enemy planes was shot down in a 25-minute battle.

Important Junction

Mestre is an important road and railway junction, connecting with Venice over a causeway running across Lake Venetia. It is the relay point for military supplies coming into Italy from Yugoslavia, Hungary and Austria, and for oil from Rumania.

Other Allied bombers attacked enemy transport throughout the flaming battle area north and west of the Naples-Termoli line. At least 82 German vehicles were destroyed and 113 damaged, raising to 171 the total number of vehicles destroyed in two days.

Strong forces of Allied fighters and fighter-bombers joined in the fierce battle raging in the Termoli area, hitting road and rail communications on the Adriatic front for the first time in weeks. They struck at Nazi lines between Termoli and Pescara, 50 miles up the coast, and as far inland as Alfredona, midway between Termoli and Rome.

American Marauder medium bombers again bombed road intersections and overpasses in the Mignano horseshoe and Isernia, the "choke point" north of the Naples battle area. They also hit the Formia Road junction, 45 miles northwest of Naples.

RAF Kittyhawk bombers roamed from Isernia as far north as Chieti, nearly 110 miles north of Naples, to wreck or damage 195 enemy vehicles as a "considerable" movement of enemy transport in that direction was reported. In all, six German planes were shot down for the day, compared with three Allied planes lost.

Vichy Rushes Help to Quell Rebel French

By the Associated Press

Madrid, Oct. 7 (AP).—A French domestic situation growing rapidly worse, with bread blacker than ever, less meat than before or no meat at all, soaring prices, and increasing attacks by "strange marauders in the mountains," was pictured today by Paris correspondents.

Border reports said that increased French underground activity had forced the Vichy government to rush reinforcements to Saint-Flour in the upper Auvergne Mountains, where a previous expedition sent against French guerillas was defeated with heavy casualties.

(A Berlin broadcast heard in London said that 18 persons were killed and 78 were injured yesterday when the Paris-Marseille Express crashed into the Lyon-Dijon Express, which had been derailed by saboteurs. The collision occurred between Lyon and Dijon, the broadcast said.)

Other reports said the French mountain guerillas had received a supply of arms and ammunition parachuted from an Allied plane last weekend.

One correspondent reported that Parisians view conditions calmly, and when Maurice Chevalier, former movie star, sings on the Paris radio "Ca sent bon, la France" (France smells good), the Parisians reply ironically:

"Tuparles, Maurice" (you said a mouthful, Maurice).

Hitler Reported Out to Clear Europe of Jews Before Peace

By John Colburn
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, Oct. 7.—Adolf Hitler was reported today to have ordered all Jews cleared out of Europe before the end of the war, with a purge in Italy scheduled to follow immediately after the current persecution in Denmark.

The capitulation of the Badoglio government in Italy already is being blamed in Rome on the Jews, according to reports received here, and German papers in Rome declare that "fascism demands that Jews should be rendered harmless and must disappear from the national life of Italy."

This phrase is similar to that used in official German announcements launching the pogrom in Denmark.

The Stockholm newspaper Social Demokraten said it had learned from informed German circles that a Hitlerian decree already had been issued ordering all Jews cleared from Europe.

Eichmann in Charge

The order was declared being carried out under Storm Troop Leader Eichmann, known as the "Jew Dictator" of Europe. Eichmann was born in Palestine after his parents went there as German colonists.

Another Swedish source was told by a high German Elite Guard officer who visited here recently that "whether we win the war or not, one thing is sure: Not a single Jew and very few Poles will be left in Europe."

Both the Social Demokraten and the Svenska Dagbladet said they had learned that Nazi Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler, as well as the German Ambassador to Denmark, Werner Best, and the former military chief of Denmark, Gen. Hermann von Hannecken, all had opposed the purge in Denmark.

A prominent Jew who reached Sweden this morning said: "You can't imagine what we've been through. Our homes were sacked and burned, and small children and adults were killed."

Nazi Soldiers Help Refugees

Refugees said the Germans ordered the arrest of 7000 Jews, but that so far they had been able to round up only about 800. More than 3000 fled to Sweden. Scores were killed, and others fled to the Danish countryside.

Swedish correspondents reported Germans in Berlin were expressing indignation at the formal Swedish offer Saturday of a haven for refugee Jews from Denmark.

Refugees here, however, said German soldiers, expressing disapproval of the Nazi persecution of Danish Jews, have been assisting them to escape to Sweden.

The refugees said German soldiers in some instances had changed into civilian clothes in order to help the Jews without drawing attention to themselves.

Swedish Vessel Is Sunk by Sub In South Atlantic

Miami, Fla., Oct. 7 (AP).—The brightly-lighted motorship Venezia, with two spotlights playing on her neutral Swedish flag, was torpedoed and sunk in the South Atlantic in June, a ship's officer reported here.

All hands, 53 crewmen and two passengers, were saved.

The second officer, who described the attack, said two torpedoes were fired without warning from a submarine which never was sighted by survivors.

After the ship broke in two and sank, survivors drifted in two lifeboats for two days until they were picked up by a British ship and landed in South America.

Lisbon, Oct. 7 (AP).—A wandering bull attacked and dispersed a breadline in front of a bakery in the village of Silveiras Cabrela today, goring four girls. The bull had broken loose from a nearby field.

British Admit Nazi Gains on Island of Cos

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Oct. 7.—The British declared today that fierce resistance against German forces landing on the Dodecanese Island of Cos (Coo) was continuing, but admitted the Germans had captured a number of landing grounds and now control the town of Cos.

A British communique said the small force of Allied defenders on the island, in the Aegean Sea, was exacting a heavy toll from the Germans.

RAF bombers rained explosives on the nearby islands of Rhodes and Crete Tuesday night, pounding German airfields.

RAF fighters, who attacked German landing parties at Cos Sunday when the Nazis launched their attack to attempt to wrest the island from the Allies, said they swooped low with cannons blazing, and planted bombs among the Nazi vessels, and that they saw wrecked and smoking landing equipment scattered along the beach.

Turks Get Nazi Protest

Ankara, Oct. 6 (Delayed), (AP).—Unofficial reports in Ankara today said the German government had delivered a formal protest to the Turkish Foreign Office accusing the Turks of failing to show complete neutrality during the Allied attack on the Dodecanese and other Aegean islands.

The Germans complained, it was said, that Turkish anti-aircraft guns failed to shoot at transport planes using the coast as a cover and that British military personnel left for the islands in small boats from the Turkish shores.

Bodrum observers reported yesterday that one plane out of flights of 30 to 40 U. S. air transports, ferrying British troops crashed on Turkish soil.

Jap Ferry Sunk By Allied Sub; 500 Lives Lost

By the Associated Press

An Allied submarine, slipping boldly into the waters off Japan's west coast, sank a Japanese steamer Tuesday in an attack which took the lives of more than 500 persons, Tokyo broadcasts declared yesterday. There is little doubt that the submarine was American.

The steamer, which plied between Shimonoseki, on the principal Japanese island of Honshu, and Fusan, Korea, was on its regular ferry run, according to a Domei news agency broadcast quoting a railway ministry announcement.

The Domei broadcast said the steamer was the Konron Maru, while a Tokyo broadcast of the railways ministry announcement, recorded and translated from the Japanese by United States Government monitors, gave the name as Homdon Maru.

Despite strenuous efforts by warships and naval planes to rescue the passengers and crew, Tokyo said, only 72 of the 616 persons aboard had been reported saved up to the time of the announcement at 6:30 p. m. Tokyo time (5:30 a. m., E. W. T.). Rough seas and communication trouble were said to have hampered the rescue work.

The announcement said the steamer was hit by a single torpedo and sank "after several seconds." It described the site of the atack as in the vicinity of Oki Island, some 130 square miles in size, which lies in the Tsushima Strait between Japan and Korea, separating the east China Sea and the Sea of Japan.

Rome Fascists Get Protection

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, Oct. 7.—A Rome dispatch to the Tribune de Geneve said today that, under cover of German guns, Fascists again have emerged on the streets of the Italian capital, but declared they still dared to appear in public only in groups.

The dispatch, which passed through German censorship, frankly added the comment that opponents of the party believe "the Fascists' return had doomed them even more than did the events of July 25"—Benito Mussolini's abdication.

The Fascists, toward whom the Nazi occupation forces were said to have an attitude of "tolerant well wishing," were retaliating for the popular destruction of party insignia and emblems on the streets and buildings of Rome, the correspondent declared.

He added that the emblems of the House of Savoy have been removed and destroyed wherever possible, and that over the Palazzo Venezia flies an Italian flag with the center emblem of the House of Savoy cut out.

The Fascists have taken up the idea that Rome is an open city, the Swiss dispatch said, but questioned whether the capital could be considered such under present conditions.

A Rome dispatch to the Bern Der Bund said that in the minds of the people of Rome the thought uppermost is "what happens next?" But the people apparently are politically indifferent which, the dispatch said, may "mask their real feelings."

In northern Italy the Nazis continued to encounter resistance. A Swiss telegraphic agency dispatch from Chiasso said German authorities in Milan had warned the people they have until October 12 to return guns, ammunition and equipment carried away from antiaircraft gun posts. German military law will apply to anyone found with such equipment after the deadline, the dispatch added.

dictating a change of strategy and a detour for United States forces.

8. America is pouring out millions on harbors and airfields useless to this country after the war.

9. American soldiers on little islands hitherto unoccupied by white men are bitterly resentful because on the heels of their occupation one lone British officer arrives, complete with a desk, and runs up the British flag.

10. Once the United Nations victory is assured, revolution is expected to break out again in Spain, with the Republicans renewing their fight for control.

11. Mead brought forth a batch of clippings from the British and Australian press to show the anti-American bias he charged. The United States was given credit for only 10 per cent of the victories in Italy. In one day an Australian paper carried scare stories of Australian girls being raped by American soldiers.

12. Lend-lease supplies sent by this country to Great Britain are being distributed by the British as their own products, breeding good will for the British at the expense of this country and laying the basis for future British trade.

13. Russell was critical of the destroyers-for-bases deal by which the United States acquired military rights in some bases for 99 years in exchange for "overage destroyers." In the life of an individual 99 years is a long time, Russell asserted, but it is nothing at all in the life of a nation.

14. The United States should acquire permanent rights in Newfoundland, Iceland and Greenland for its own future protection.

15. Great Britain and Russia, it was charged, are hoarding their own supplies of petroleum products in the Persian Gulf area around Iran and Iraq, permitting the United States, which has about 12 per cent of the world's petroleum supply, to supply nearly 70 per cent of the fuel for the entire United Nations' war effort.

16. Lodge declared that relief and rehabilitation in occupied countries would pose such a problem that it should be under military, instead of civilian direction.

17. Senators joined in stating that a need for a clear national policy for this country is strikingly apparent.

Although the session was held behind closed doors, after a huge globe had been rolled in and a big map set up, most Senators left the chamber apparently believing that few military secrets had been revealed and that the American public was clearly entitled to all the information given.

Senator Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky and Brewster (Republican) of Maine will conclude the executive sessions today.

A list of 10 conclusions by the five Senators, issued to the press, stressed the need for increase in British and Russia oil output, and the necessity of acquiring permanent rights in airfields built "at a tremendous cost to our people." They said that "the use of some of these fields may be just as essential to our security as battleships or divisions in the future."

They called for the United States to adopt a policy of sending military, diplomatic and business personnel abroad to work as a team, with appropriate international rank.

In advance of his appearance today, Chandler made it clear that he was going to ask the Senate to continue keeping in touch with developments abroad by sending groups of observers. He said that the Senate, and through it the American people, should have representation at conferences of this country and its allies.

out new congressional legislation," the committee said.

Small Manufacturers

The committee warned that small manufacturers, particularly, will have their limited financial resources so tied up in war work that they will be unable to convert to civilian production until their working capital is released.

Criticizing current independent action by various Government agencies to establish termination procedures, the committee added, "This situation is already causing considerable confusion amongst the contractors."

The committee disclosed that it is also making studies on such "vital postwar problems" as demobilization of our armed forces and workers, compensation for workers during the transition period, liquidation of war-time controls, disposal of Government-owned plants, and reorganization of the Federal tax structure.

Chairman of the committee is Ralph E. Flanders, president, Jones and Lamson Machine Co., Springfield, Vt. Members include Chester C. Davis, president, Federal Reserve Bank, St. Louis; William L. Batt, president, SKF Industries, Salem, Ind., and vice chairman of War Production Board; S. Bayard Colgate, chairman of the board, Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., Jersey City.

Johnston, president, United States Chamber of Commerce; Thomas W. Lamont, chairman of the board, J. P. Morgan & Co., and Beardsley Ruml, chairman, Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and treasurer, R. "We feel it is urgent for your committee to recognize the force of Treasury Secretary Morgenthau's statement that no unduly heavy tax burden must be put on the people whose incomes are so low that 'they cannot meet their tax bills and still maintain a standard of living which will permit them to continue to help in the effective prosecution of the war,'" Murray wrote.

Fulmer Testifies

The committee also heard Chairman Fulmer (Democrat) of South Carolina of the House Agriculture Committee, and other witnesses testify in support of the Treasury's recommendation to lift the present 3 per cent levy on transportation of property.

Benjamin Botwinick, chairman of the tax committee for the American Business Congress, asked that additional relief from excess profits levies be given to small business.

He also proposed that a 5 per cent tax on gross individual income be substituted for the Treasury's program, and adopted in preference to a sales tax. "All sorts of complications and evasions are part and parcel of a sales tax," he said.

noise came from the barrage of antiaircraft guns.

The bombs in the London area scored three hits in the yard of a convent where 100 children are housed in the daytime. There was no one in the building at the time and no casualties were reported. Explosives also were dropped in another residential area, but casualties were believed small and damage slight.

The raiders sounded like fighter-bombers, which the German air force has been using recently.

Londoners, including hundreds of American and Canadian soldiers, experiencing their first big air raid, braved the falling shell fragments to watch the gunfire.

House Pushes Own Measure on Dependents

listed man for chief support would get $50 monthly (instead of $37 as at present), and wo parents thus dependent would receive $68 (instead of $47).

One parent and either a brother or a sister chiefly dependent would also receive a $68 total, with $11 more for each additional dependent brother or sister.

If there were no dependent parents, $42 would be allowed for one brother or sister, with $11 more for each additional brother or sister chiefly dependent on the enlisted man.

Benefits to parents only "substantially" dependent on an enlisted man would be cut. Only $37 would be provided for one or both parents not chiefly dependent (compared with $47 under present law).

One novel provision allowed payments to husbands of WAVES, WACS and other women in the service, provided husbands could prove actual dependency.

Other provisions, covering divorced wives and their children, as well as motherless children of servicemen, with minor variations, follow the lines of the original bill passed by the Senate, committeemen said.

The Senate, in passing the draft bill Wednesday, had reenacted its original measure with more generous allowances for service children, but the House committee decided yesterday to lift these out of the draft legislation and speed them to enactment first.

As passed by the Senate, the draft measure offers no interference with Selective Service induction of fathers which began last week, but tightly narrows occupational deferment loopholes for military-age nonfathers in Government and industry, permits fathers to take advance physical examination, and provides for review of existing physical standards to bring more single 4-Fs into service.

May predicted the committee will substitute more specific language for the Senate bill's provision that fathers be inducted after childless men so far as "administratively practicable."

He said he would like to provide that fathers could not be inducted until all dispensable childless men had been sifted out of the Government and industry, but did not know whether this could be done.

LEATHER like STEEL?

The same thing wears down both leather and steel: FRICTION. Each of the thousands of steps you take every day, grinds away your shoe soles, bit by bit. Moreover, the stiffer the shoes the greater the walk-friction, and the sooner your soles wear out.

WMC Will Act To Tighten Up On Job Freeze

The War Manpower Commission plans to insist on full compliance with its manpower control rules and regulations—to make it more difficult for workers to shift jobs for seemingly frivolous reasons—high WMC officials disclosed yesterday at an informal "background" conference with newsmen.

The WMC's full job-stabilization program is scheduled to go into effect nationally on October 15, with the new compliance program dovetailing into it. Under the program no worker in an essential activity anywhere in the United States will be permitted to change jobs without a statement of availability from his employer or from the United States Employment Service. Similar controls are already in effect in a number of areas of the United States, including the District of Columbia.

Compliance Lagging

The WMC officials admitted frankly that compliance has been lagging in some areas of the country—that workers are being given releases "too lightly" by employers, that some employers are accepting new workers without insisting on securing a statement of availability from the worker, and that others are ignoring the WMC program to step up the employment of women and other available sources of labor.

"If every employer refused to take a single worker without a statement of availability," one official said, "we would be over our biggest hurdle in enforcement."

He emphasized that the "biggest responsibility" for enforcement lies with employers, who can reduce turnover everywhere by insisting on compliance with the regulations.

"Exit Interviews"

WMC advised employers to install "exit interview" systems to dissuade employes who want quit slips from leaving, and to provide adequate machinery for the handling of plant grievances.

However, recognizing that dissatisfied employes do not make good workers, WMC said an employer would be justified in granting release to workers desiring to quit after the employer was satisfied that all efforts to "salvage" the workers have failed. He pointed out that an estimated $46 a man is lost every time a worker quits his job.

In embarking on the new compliance program, WMC emphasized that it did not plan to use the club of court action or other sanctions unless driven to do so by extreme cases of defiance.

The officials explained that ample indirect sanctions are available to WMC for use in the vast mapority of cases.

Employers who are violating the rules can be publicly called to book by a simple announcement that he is interfering with the community effort to mobilize manpower for war.

War contractors may be politely told by the procurement arms of the armed services with which they must deal to get new contracts to "play ball."

In extreme cases, WMC may grant statements of availability to the man's entire work force, recruiting his labor for employers who are complying.

Reviewing Procedures

Under controlled referral plans similar to the one recently placed in effect on the West Coast, employers can be denied manpower priority rating, thus effectively shutting off the supply of additional labor.

Area management-labor committees which set policy for local programs may be used to exert pressure on employers breaking the rules.

Meanwhile, WMC is reviewing its own procedures to make sure that United States Employment Service offices do not "too lightly" issue job releases refused by employers.

Local WMC offices have been instructed to set up their own compliance programs. Information needed to discover violations generally can be found by checking employment records, but when these are not available, social security tax returns may be checked.

In cases where employers are found to be employing women or minority groups in insufficient numbers, the local USES office may decline to refer any additional male workers until the situation is corrected.

625,000 Machinists Return To AFL Fold at Convention

By Joseph A. Loftus
Associated Press Staff Writer

Boston, Oct. 7.—The American Federation of Labor today welcomed back the International Association of Machinists as the largest of its affiliated unions.

A packed convention hall cheered the news of the reconciliation and Secretary George Meany's announcement that the AFL's total paid membership now was 6,564,141. The machinists' membership as of August 31 was officially announced as 625,000.

The machinists' membership made it the No. 1 AFL union in size, a rank long held by the Brotherhood of Teamsters. The Teamsters paid on 602,900 members last year.

The machinists quit the federation last May 31 after an extended row over jurisdictional rights, involving principally the Carpenters' Union. The terms of reconciliation, however, were not immediately announced.

Brown in Old Seat

The convention's action also virtually assured President Harvey W. Brown of the Machinists his old seat on the AFL Executive Council.

The application of John L. Lewis for readmission of his United Mine Workers continued as the principal conversation among the delegates, the great majority of whom believed that the issue would not be finally disposed of at this convention.

Lewis has sent a letter to Matthew Woll, chairman oft he resolutions committee, regarding his application. Informed persons said that although it is conciliatory in tone, it contains no modification in substance of the position he took in negotiations with the AFL last July. Lewis said then that he expected the AFL to take the United Mine Workers "as is" and talk about jurisdictional problems "after the fact of reaffiliation."

The Lewis letter, it is understood, recited what took place in the one negotiating session in July and said that the maiorit, of the members in District 50 of the UMW were in coal by-product and chemical plants for which the AFL had not set up any jurisdictions.

Lewis Stresses Unity Need

Lewis also said he was perfectly familiar with the federation's procedure on jurisdictional disputes and that these could be decided better after amalgamation had taken place.

He said, too, that there was necessity for labor unity, adding that labor could not afford to be divided in the postwar period.

Most of the delegates who expressed themselves indicated a belief that District 50, which crosses some AFL jurisdictional lines, was too big an obstacle to be disposed of on Lewis' terms. None believed, apparently, that Lewis would be turned down flatly but that the subject would be kept alive and discussions continued. The opinion prevailed that if Lewis met AFL leaders part way it was only a question of determining the date of his return.

David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, who is generally regarded as friendly to Lewis, commented that the District 50 issue would have to be disposed of first. To do otherwise, he said, would be a "bad precedent." Dubinsky is a member of the resolutions committee which is handling the Lewis application.

Hearing Called For November 3 On Dog Ordinance

A public hearing will be held November 3 on a proposed county ordinance to prevent a further spread of rabies in Fairfax County.

The ordinance, prepared by Commonwealth's Attorney Paul E. Brown and James H. Stone of the Fairfax health department, would prohibit the running at large of dogs unless muzzled, or except when hunting, and under control of responsible parties. It also provides for a dog pound.

Dogs, by provision of the proposed ordinance, could be redeemed for a fee of $5, plus 50 cents a day board.

Stassen's Name To Be Entered in Nebraska Primary

Lincoln, Nebr., Oct. 7 (AP).—Harold E. Stassen, former Governor of Minnesota and now a lieutenant commander in the Navy, will be entered in the Nebraska presidential preference primary on the Republican ticket next year, John Quinn, who said he will handle the campaign for Stassen in this State, announced today.

Quinn disclosed plans for entering Stassen on the preference primary ballot in announcing his resignation today as deputy secretary of State.

Quinn, who was active in the Thomas E. Dewey Nebraska campaign in 1940, said that "in my way of thinking Dewey is not a candidate now and that rather unexpected developments would have to occur before Dewey would enter the presidential race."

Bioff Tells Jury Finer Points of Extortion

By International News Service

New York, Oct. 7.—Squat Willie Bioff described for a Federal Court jury today the finer points of extortion as practiced in large, round figures—"two million or three million, I've forgotten which"—by "the boys from Chicago."

Bioff testified as a Government witness against eight men on trial for shaking down the movie industry for more than a million dollars under threat of "trouble" and strikes by the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes, an AFL union which they allegedly "kidnaped."

Now serving time with former union president George E. Browne following their conviction on extortion, Bioff appeared to relish his new role and occasionally chuckled as he unfolded his account of the "mob's" pressure deals against large movie companies and theaters. He figured prominently in each episode.

A Florida meeting with Al Capone, said Bioff, took place in January, 1936, only three months before a number of movie executives were taken over the hurdles for huge sums as the racketeer-ridden "union board" began branching out.

Bioff also told of one meeting in New York three months later with several movie executives which resulted in a $75,000 "cash" payoff, $50,000 of which went to Paul de Lucia, alias Paul Ricca, one of the defendants. He and Browne each received $12,500, Bioff said.

Bioff said he informed Nicholas Schenck, then president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, he would have to have "two million, three million, I've forgotten which," or "we would close up every theater in the country."

After this preliminary, the witness continued, another meeting was arranged in New York and Leo Spitz of RKO, was given "the old convincer." The conferees agreed, Bioff said, that payments of $50,000 a year "would be OK for the major companies such as Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount, Warners and Loew's. We thought we'd let the others off for $25,000 a year each."

Schenck soon afterward delivered $50,000 in cash to Bioff and another movie executive gave him $25,000, it was testified.

Western Union Ordered to Obey Child Labor Law

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Federal Judge Simon H. Rifkind ruled today the U. S. Department of Labor was entitled to summary judgment in its suit to restrain the Western Union Telegraph Company from violating the child labor provision of the 1938 fair labor standards act.

Attorneys in the case said the decision called for replacement of about eleven and one-half per cent of the company's messengers.

The jurist decided against the company's contention that it was not bound by the child labor provision because it was not a producer of goods and merely transmitted the ideas of others.

"One cannot escape the prohibition of the statute," declared Judge Rifkind, "by inventing a magic carpet."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

One of the most important congressional investigations since Pearl Harbor will start next week when Senator Kilgore's War Mobilization Committee opens hearing on the question of giving the public a chance to use war patents after the war.

Approximately one billion dollars has been expended by American taxpayers for the research and development of war implements. After the last war a lot of these discoveries were turned over to monopolies of private industry. The Radio Corporation of America, for instance, got the Navy's radio patents.

So now Senator Kilgore's committee wants to find out whether such a vital discovery as radar will be turned over to the public as a whole or bottled up by one or two big companies. The Kilgore committee intends to introduce legislation to protect the public.

One thing which already worries the Senators is the "good will" advertising boasts of several big concerns about all the new living comforts that will be available after the war—due to wartime research. What the ads fail to point out is that the Government is footing the major part of the research bill.

West Virginia's two-fisted Senator Harley M. Kilgore, chairman of the War Mobilization Committee, is going to do a little advertising of his own on this point. His committee will delve chiefly into these fields:

(1) War contracts. Kilgore is anxious to know if new production formulas and techniques, developed by big war contractors at Government expense, will be available to smaller competing concerns after the war.

(2) College studies. War research in college laboratories is confined largely to a few big institutions, headed by Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The Kilgore committee wants to make the scientific findings of M. I. T. and other Federally assisted colleges available to smaller schools; also wants to prevent industry from luring top-flight instructors from the campuses.

(3) Foreign patents. Many people fear that Axis patents seized by the Alien Property Custodian will either be returned to Axis owners after the war or will be sold to a small group of American industrialists, as happened after the last war. Senator Kilgore wants to determine what procedure, if any, is being developed to insure that foreign patents will be licensed to small as well as big American manufacturers.

(4) Public information. One of the chief arguments major war contractors, as well as the WPB, War and Navy Departments have raised against awarding contracts to small plants is that they aren't "technically organized" to handle Government jobs efficiently and speedily. The Kilgore committee wants to lay the groundwork for a Government technical service, which will make available to little business information about patents and techniques.

NOTE: Another thing Senator Kilgore may probe is the payment of royalties by the Government on patents developed with taxpayers' money. For instance, the Government is supposed to have free access to the patent pool of the Radio Corp. of America, but some war contractors who deal in the RCA pool charge royalties to the Government under cost-plus contracts.

Will Rogers in London

CONGRESSMAN Will Rogers of California, son of the cowboy humorist, came back from London singing the praises of American-British cooperation in England.

American troops, which he described as the new "Army of Occupation," live off the fat of the land and are treated royally by the British. There is nothing too good for them. Only trouble is they occasionally take a girl away from a British Tommy.

Will's father was a frequent visitor in London, and everyone remembered him. So it was like old home week for the young Congressman from California.

British Idle Oil

Maine's eagle-eyed Senator Brewster met Gen. B. B. Somervell, chief of the Army's service forces on the Pacific island of Fiji, immediately tackled him on the dynamite-laden, all-important question of why the USA was supplying 70 per cent of Allied oil, though we have only 25 per cent of the world's oil reserves.

"Right around the Persian Gulf," reminded Senator Brewste, "the British have oil refineries and limitless quantities of oil. Why don't we get more oil out of the Near East instead of hauling it all the way from Texas?"

"We are rushing refining equipment to Arabia as quickly as we can," replied General Somervell.

"Yes," countered the Senator from Maine, "but why use precious shipping space carting refining equipment half way around the world when the British already have a refinery at the Gulf of Persia. The manager of the Anglo-Persian oil company told us that his refinery could produce 60 per cent more oil. Why not put it to work instead of exhausting our own oil reserves.

"Furthermore," Brewster continued, "the crude oil from Persian wells is so good that it can be pumped right into ships as bunker oil without refining. If we don't get busy and use it, we'll wake up after the war to find the United States with no oil left, and dependent on the British Empire."

Merry-Go-Rounds

The globe-circling Senators reported that the British were far ahead of American officials when it came to coordination and teamwork. In Cairo, British Minister for the Dominions Casey (former Australian Minister in Washington) sits down every morning with the British admiral and commanding general to work out the day's program . . . American commanding officers, diplomats, OEW, Lend-Lease, and Relief executives, the Senators reported, don't seem to like cooperation. This is one reason Jim Landis, retiring head of Civil Defense, is going to Cairo as American coordinator . . . U. S. Senators brought back an eye-popping story from Cairo—how the King of Egypt refused to see the British Ambassador. After the Ambassador waited several days and got no audience with the King, a British tank company arrived at the palace gates with a detachment of field artillery. With the artillery pointed at the Palace, a tank battered down the palace gates, and the British Ambassador drove through in an armored car. He saw the King.

MOTHER-IN-LAW CHEERS LONG SOUGHT RELIEF!

Had Been "Irregular" for Years!

Have you often despaired of ever finding normal regularity? Then, by all means, read this unsolicited letter:

"For many long years, my mother-in-law had suffered from common constipation. She used to take all kinds of pills and medicines, but got no lasting relief. Upon starting to use KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN, her trouble cleared up. She feels like a new person, she says. She wanted me to tell the world how your product helped her." Mrs. Poline Balis, 734 East 160th Street, Bronx, N. Y.

How do scientists explain the apparent "magic" of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN's relief? Simply thus: ALL-BRAN is one of Nature's most effective sources of "cellulosic" elements — lack of which in sufficient amounts in the diet is a common cause of constipation! These elements help the friendly colonic flora fluff up and lighten the colonic wastes for easy, natural elimination. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN doesn't work by "purging"—or by "sweeping you out." It is a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

If this is your trouble eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly. Drink plenty of water! See if you don't find the welcome relief you've hoped for! Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

America Warned by Johnston On Hasty Postwar Promises

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 7.—America, in making manifest her postwar stake in world order, "cannot and ought not to make promises beyond her ability to perform," Eric A. Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said today.

"We must not be impelled by our good will and our native idealism to rush headlong from the prewar role of indifference to a postwar role of Utopianism," he said. "Excessive American promises can only lead to disillusionment and resentment abroad and a new cynicism at home."

In a speech prepared for delivery to the American Life Convention, Johnston said, "those who venture, after one whirl around the globe, to prescribe medicine for every existing ill seem to me lacking in realism and modesty. Unfortunately, this is not one world, but many worlds rolled into one."

He said the complexity of international affairs "convinced" him that after the war "we shall still be living on a most imperfect globe, as far as ever from the millennium, and under these circumstances our chief reliance will still be our own strength and good sense."

Unions Will Block Incentive Pay Plan

Developments Point to Use by Units Of Veto Power Granted Them by WLB

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Units of organized labor will, with few exceptions, use the veto power granted by the War Labor Board to block extension of incentive wage plans to most war plants, developments indicated yesterday.

Symptomatic of labor's attitude was a vote of "emphatic opposition" to the extension of incentive pay plans at the CIO United Automobile Workers convention in Buffalo. The convention rejected a minority report of the convention's resolutions committee, which disapproved of incentive wages in principle, but proposed to permit local unions the option of extending plans.

The majority report, which was adopted after extended debate, said such plans "will result only in further aggravating the dislocation and unbalancing of production schedules, resulting in layoff, unemployment and dissipation of our manpower," and banned their extension. Local unions were given the option of perpetuating plans already in existence.

Green in Opposition

Earlier William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, indicated the AFL's opposition to adoption of incentive pay plans in a signed editorial in the Federationist, the organization's publication.

Green said that incentive wage formulas "are not nearly so scientific as the going rates negotiated by management and unions, based on past experience and tested by capacity to produce and pay."

The attitude of labor apparently has doomed the plan of WPB Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson to extend incentive wage plans to the bulk of the aircraft industry as a means of securing a 10 to 15 per cent increase in plane production with the present work force.

Wilson's plan called for the payment on a plant-wide basis of a percentage increase in pay for each percentage increase in production. Since the autoworkers is the dominant CIO union in the aircraft field, with the rest of the industry controlled by AFL unions, it is indicated that further extension of aircraft incentive wage plans will be restricted to a few unorganized plants.

WLB, in approving a Wilson-type plant-wide incentive plan for the Truman Aeronautical Engineering Corp., an unorganized plant, specified that it would never approve an incentive plan which had become the product of a dispute between labor and management. Thus, labor opposition is sufficient to kill any incentive plan on the theory that such plans will not work without the cooperation of the workers involved.

Intra-Union Battle

The incentive wage controversy was injected into a bitter intra-union fight at the UAW convention between the followers of Vice President Walter Reuther and Executive Board Member Richard T. Leonard who supported the majority report and Vice President Richard T. Frankensteen and Secretary Treasurer George F. Addes who supported the minority report.

A similar cleavage resulted in approval by the convention of a majority report conditionally indorsing a fourth term for President Roosevelt after a minority report of the convention's constitution committee recommending unqualified support of the Nation's Chief Executive was withdrawn.

The indorsement was conditioned on the display of an "aggressive effort" by the President to achieve a "sound and progressive" program, including a price rollback, revision of the "Little Steel" formula, democratic rationing, equal opportunity without employment discrimination, and manpower mobilization without resort to national service legislation.

R. J. Thomas, who has headed the UAW since 1938, and successfully avoided tangling in the intra-union war, was reelected president at the convention.

Although no one was nominated to oppose Thomas, Norman R. Matthews, president of Detroit Local 190, announced from the convention floor that his delegation "does not vote for" Thomas. The local, representing Packard Motor Car Co. employes, had indicated earlier that it planned to support Matthews for the presidency.

Defenses on Wake Believed Smashed

Since Salerno

Fifth Army's Yank Losses Total 8307

American troops in Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark's Fifth Army have suffered 8307 battle casualties since landing at Salerno a month ago—511 killed, 5428 wounded and 2368 missing, Secretary Stimson announced yesterday.

Officers here noted that the ratio of dead to wounded was far less than usual. The ratio normally is about 1 to 3½, but the larger portion of missing may have lost their lives, it was said.

Stimson disclosed that American casualties were somewhat greater than those suffered by the British units in Clark's Army. The Fifth Army, he added, was made up of approximately equal numbers of Americans and British at the time of the landing, but subsequent reinforcements have been largely American.

The War Secretary predicted that Allied forces would meet stiff opposition and that casualties would become even heavier before the Italian campaign is ended.

The Germans, he disclosed, have reinforced their Italian garrison to such an extent that they could be expected to fight a series of delaying actions.

In answer to a question on the problem of feeding the Italian people, Stimson declared that while the problem had placed a burden on shipping, it was not an unexpected burden. Supplies into Naples were beginning to arrive in volume, he added.

Naples Harbor Being Cleared

Engineers now are working day and night to clear the harbor of Naples with greater prospects of success than was first believed possible, Stimson said.

The Germans attempted to render the harbor useless by sinking ships and destroying the docks and port facilities, he said, but a preliminary survey indicates that the damage was not so great as the Allies had feared.

Health conditions in Naples were good, the War Secretary reported, with the volume of sickness small. He said only 13 cases of typhus fever had been reported to date.

Shelling May Presage Thrust Into Heart of Jap Pacific Holdings

By the Associated Press

Japanese defenses on stolen Wake Island appeared overwhelmed yesterday after a heavy naval bombardment and carrier plane bombing Tuesday of the tiny Pacific speck which the Nipponese converted into a strong air base.

The island, on which a gallant band of Marines held out against violent attack until December 22, 1941, lies 2300 miles west of Hawaii, 1500 miles northeast of Guam and 1300 miles from the great Japanese naval base of Truk, north of the Solomons and New Guinea.

The Navy withheld details.

The blow at Wake followed rather closely four apparently related moves in the central Pacific:

1. A carrier plane bombardment of Marcus Island, between Wake and Japan, on August 30.

2. A carrier bombing of Tarawa and other principal bases of the Gilbert Islands on September 18 and 19.

3. The seizure of Nanumea, the extreme northern island of the Ellice Orchipelago, by Marines on September 4.

4. A recent conference of the three ranking United States admirals at Pearl Harbor.

Lumped together, the actions suggested that the United States Pacific Fleet was sparring in the preliminaries of a smash into the center of Japan's far-flung Pacific holdings—possibly at the Gilberts and Marshall Islands, which bar the direct approach to Truk.

The reduction of Truk would imperil the entire Japanese hold on the south and southwest Pacific, including the Dutch East Indies, New Britain, New Guinea, Timor, and Malaya.

It was the ninth raid on Wake. Seven attacks were carried out by long-range bombers. This was the second task force bombardment. The persistence of attacks suggested the fleet was intent upon knocking out this stepping stone which the Japanese use to ferry planes to the Marshalls

Cabin Cruiser Found At Sea; No One Aboard

W. M. Vale, crewman aboard the fishing boat El-Fin, towed the boat here and learned it had put to sea September 30 with a Tony Miller of Wilmington, Calif., as skipper.

Yanks Smash Giant Nazi Tanks With New Bazooka Rocket Gun

John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Battle successes of two of America's newest weapons were revealed yesterday by an Army chief just back from the Italian fighting front.

Maj. Gen. Elbridge G. Chapman, jr., commanding general of the Army Airborne Command, disclosed that individual Yankee soldiers learned in Sicily and Italy how to knock out the giant German Tiger tank with the United States Army's new rocket gun—the bazooka.

At first, he said, the troops found the shots from their bazookas were bouncing off the thick steel walls of the Nazi heavy tank. Then they discovered it had a weak spot. They waited under cover until the tank had gone by, and hit it in the rear, where the armor was light, and the tank stopped.

General Chapman, in an interview at the Pentagon Building, told of the part played by United States paratroopers in the Battle of Salerno. He reported how they dropped from the skies at several crucial points to relieve the pressure on our forces at the time the going was the toughest last month.

On one occasion, he said, a battalion of paratroops was dropped under cover of darkness near Avellino, a key road junction back of the German lines. Their mission was to harass enemy communications and hinder them from bringing up reinforcements in their attempt to push the American Fifth Army back into the sea.

A portion of the sky troops landed inside a Nazi tank bivouac, reformed and shot up the camp. The considerably larger enemy force was put to flight.

Bazookas, Rifles, Grenades

"As the surprised Germans fled they were caught in the machine-gun crossfire of their own patrols set up to guard the camp from an attack from without," said General Chapman.

"The next morning the Nazis came back in force and our paratroops took to the hills. After destroying bridges and trucks, the greater part of them managed to get back into our lines."

On this mission, said Chapman, the troops carried bazookas, rifles and grenades. The last were especially effective in knocking out the tanks.

No airborne troops were used in the original landing near Salerno, as in the Sicilian invasion. They were brought in when reinforcements were needed in a hurry after the Germans counter-attacked in force.

Two battalions landed near Altavilla close to our front lines, made their way in the dark to the heights back of the German-held town and seized them. Despite strong Nazi efforts to dislodge them, the paratroopers held on until another battalion came, then the enemy withdrew.

This eased the pressure on our lines considerably, General Chapman said, adding that our commanders in Italy told him the "paratroop units rushed in at this time were of material assistance in holding Salnero."

Quick Help From Air

He noted that the paratroop units were dropped at Altavilla only a few hours after the American commander at Salerno called for reinforcements. It took considerably longer to bring in other reinforcements by sea.

General Chapman said that during the fighting near Altavilla, the paratroops often were within 50 to 75 yards of the enemy, and he told a little story.

"One of our sergeants," he said, "was a graduate of the University of Heidelburg, having come to the United States in 1935. Hearing the Nazis talking close by, he began shouting commands in German.

"He ordered one of them to move to the left—out in the open—and shot him when he obeyed," said Chapman. "Another Nazi was ordered to move to the left. He complied and was shot. Then he told another to stop 'lying flat like an officer' and to get his head up and aim his gun through the sight. He was shot. All told, he knocked off a half dozen of them this way."

At Altavilla, Chapman said, the mountainous terrain provided a severe test. Normally, the paratroops are dropping from altitudes of 500 to 800 feet, so they will be less exposed to fire coming down. Here the planes had to fly over a mountain and the men jumped from 2800 to 3200 feet.

Wallace Calls Yom Kippur Emblem of Battle To Free Millions of Humanity From Bondage

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Vice President Wallace, greeting Jewish servicemen on the eve of Yom Kippur, last night charged them with the task of helping to free humanity from bondage. Yom Kippur, or Day of Atonement, begins today at sunset.

"As you enter upon 24 hours of fasting and prayer as part of your worship, you know that one of your tasks is to free from bondage millions of men and women who are not free to worship God as they choose," the Vice President said in a message over WTOP, broadcast under auspices of the Army and Navy Committee of the Jewish Welfare Board.

Equality for All

"All of us who are citizens of the United States are not of the same faith, or the same color, or the same race," continued Wallace, "but we can live peacefully here if we will give every man an opportunity to live and work without being persecuted because of his faith or color or race."

The Vice President commended those who "are fighting bravely on many fronts," and said that those who serve in this war "will be honored whether they belong to the so-called blueblods from Boston or Negroes from South Carolina."

"Let us remember always," he stated, that although our religious beliefs are close to our hearts, although we are proud of our ancestry, in a larger sense we are not Jews or Gentiles, whites or blacks. We are the people of the United States."

Protestant Felicitation

"When you and your fellow soldiers and sailors have won this war," said the Vice President, "it is the prayer of all of us that all men on the face of the globe will be free to worship God according to their own dictates, and that you will return to a country with its face toward the future, where our hopes and dreams and prayers for a more abundant life will come true."

Meanwhile, in a gesture of interfaith unity, the Washington Ministerial Union of local Protestant clergy sent Yom Kippur felicitations to Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, spiritual leader of the Washington Hebrew (Reformed) Congregation.

The message, which will be read at tonight's Yom Kippur services by Rabbi Gerstenfeld, was signed by Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, speaking for the Rev. Armand T. Eyler, president of the Ministerial Union, who is in Cleveland at the General Episcopal convention.

Christian Challenge

"In the observance of the Day of Atonement by the Jewish household of faith," the statement declared, in part, "you are calling not only your people to put on sackcloth and ashes and walk humbly before God, but you are also calling us of the Christian faith to a new realization of our utter dependence on Him who is our refuge and strength."

Another demonstration of interfaith good will is the invitation of First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., to the Washington Hebrew Congregation to use its facilities for the Yom Kippur services. The Clarendon Methodist Church will do likewise for the Arlington Jewish Community Center, whose facilities are too small for the High Holy Day throngs in crowded Arlington County.

Program Today

Dr. Julius Morgenstern, president of Cincinnati's Hebrew Union College, will speak today at 8 p. m. at First Church and tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. at the Reformed Temple, while Rabbi Gerstenfeld will preach tonight at the Temple and tomorrow at the First Church.

Chaplain Aryeh Lev, of the Army Chief of Chaplains' Office, will conduct "Atonement" services for Jewish servicemen and servicewomen today at 8 p. m. and tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the auditorium of the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts. nw. Cantor Abrasha Robofsky, of Camp Lee, Va., will chant. The Army and Navy Committee of the Jewish Welfare Board has arranged the program. The Jewish USO Club will serve a "break-the-fast" supper in Center's canteen, followed by a social hour.

Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, spiritual leader of Adas Israel Congregation, and a distinguished Jewish scholar, yesterday pictured the significance of Yom Kipper in a statement to The Post, saying, in part:

Holiest of Festivals

"It is the holiest and most precious festival on the calendar because it brings to the mind God's universal loving forgiveness and the release from the killing burden of sin, in religious rebirth.

"It epitomizes the redemptive power of spiritual self-renewal through repentance and faith when expressed in penitence, prayer, and charity."

Cantor Israel Flusberg, of this city, accompanied by a large choir from New York City, will chant the "Kol Nidre" tonight and tomorrow at Ohev Sholom Synagogue, 5th and I sts. nw. Servcies will be today at 6:30 p. m. and all day tomorrow, beginning at 7:30 a. m. The Yiskor (memorial) service will be tomorrow at 11 a. m.

One Jewish religious leader said last night that the synagogues and temples are anticipating the largest crowds in many years because of the overcrowded city and the fact that Yom Kippur falls on the Jewish Sabbath.

Independent Candidate For Justice to Speak

river in force and perhaps even well beyond the bridgeheads.

Soviet airmen beat a path for the ed army and battered German roads of retreat, Moscow broadcasts said.

The communique, recorded by the Soviet monitor here, was read twice over the Moscow radio and was followed by patriotic songs—a method reserved for great events.

Soviet forces planted themselves firmly across the middle Dnieper on the west bank north of Kiev, south of Pereyaslav, 50 miles southeast of the Ukraine capital, and southeast of Kremenchug between that city and Dnepropetrovsk on the river bend.

The Russian movement suggested another great series of annihilation pincers similar to those so successfully carried out at Stalingrad, where Gen. Friedrich von Paulus' German Sixth Army was wiped out.

Nevel put the Russians astride a junction commanding lines to Leningrad on the north, Vitebsk in White Russia to the south, and to points in the Baltic states on lines branching off the railway running southwest to Warsaw in Poland.

Extending their front farther northward, the Russians also made a nine-mile advance in the Volkhov sector southeast of Leningrad in what may be another offensive aimed at forever removing the German siege arc before Russia's second largest city.

Kirishi, a rail junction 65 miles southeast of Leningrad on this front between Lakes Ladoga and Ilmen, was captured, along with eight other large populated places.

Such an evacuation means virtual clearance of the enemy from the central Solomons, except possibly for small groups still contesting the Americans on Vella Lavella.

On Bougainville, Allied raiding planes downed 9 out of 30 intercepting planes over the enemy air base of Kahili, the communique said.

On New Guinea, Australian troops, driving down the Ramu Valley to menace the Japanese coastal base of Madang, are pressing on against the retreating enemy.

The Kahili raiders, four engined bombers escorted by fighters, also destroyed an unspecified number of planes on the ground and started fires.

"All our planes returned," the communique said.

The Japanese airforce engaged in limited activity, attacking the airfield captured by the Australians north of Finschhafen, New Guinea, and also lightly raiding Allied positions on Goodenough and Kiriwina Islands in the D'Entrecasteaux group.

Draft Board Threats to U. S. Workers Halted

By Kurt Kelman
Post Staff Writer

Letters sent by draft boards to Government employes "threatening" them with induction unless they change to "essential" work are in violation of a recent ruling by National Selective Service headquarters, a spokesman said here yesterday.

Faced with reports that an increasing number of Federal workers have been told by their boards to "work or fight," implying that the local boards would not consider their present Government jobs as deferrable, the Selective Service official declared that a memorandum had been sent to State headquarters "recently" which reminded inductees that Government is classed as "essential work" by the WMC. Boards were asked, he said, to desist from writing letters of the kind indicated.

Must Have Release

United States Employment Service officials made it plain that they will issue statements of availability only to those Federal employes who have a release from their agency, or who can prove, as in private industry, that their skill will be better used in the occupation they are seeking.

Government employes are already working in "essential" jobs, it was pointed out, and the USES cannot be expected to find "critical" jobs, the ones that secure draft deferments, for all who want them.

The entire question came up when Charles E. Farmer, District USES director, released figures showing that during September, only 1077 men were placed by his office out of a total of 2535 who filed applications.

Farmer explained this by saying that many of the applicants were Federal workers who were anxious to clarify their status after strict WMC regulations went into effect September 1. He declared that the USES cannot refer men to new jobs who already are doing "essential" work.

CSC Reviewing Situation

It was indicated that the Civil Service Commission is reviewing the situation in an effort to "clear the air."

Announcing the placement of 3629 men and women by the USES in the month of September, Farmer said that this constituted an increase of 355 over the previous month. Another indication of the heightened interest of the public in WMC's efforts to supply and stabilize labor was the number of applications which increased from 538 to 4364 from August to September.

In both months, less than half the men applying for jobs were actually placed. WMC regulations, restricting the transfer of "essential" workers, were held responsible for this apparent contradiction of the Government's efforts to fill jobs.

Fred Z. Hetzel, area WMC director, said that final agreement on the regional and area stabilization plans was reached at the end of a two-day conference of regional officials here. He refused to indicate its terms, and promised release of the plan "within the next few days." The plan will go into effect October 15.

Home Rule For D. C.

Washingtonians once more have a great opportunity to make their influence for good local government felt. Several members of the Senate District Committee have taken definite steps toward restoring the franchise and giving the local community a responsible government of its own. On the House side the Judiciary Committee is considering the Walter bill to give the District a delegate in Congress. An increasing number of Congressmen are aroused by the results of legislative chaos and administrative shortcomings in the local government. These men are beginning to prepare the way for a new deal in District government, and their efforts can be successful if they are given wholehearted community support.

Senator McCarran's home-rule bill has much to commend it. The Senator proposes a city-manager type of government to exercise the local functions now devolving upon the Board of Commissioners. Since the proposed seven commissioners would be elected by the people, they would doubtless respond to the popular will in cleaning up the conditions that now make this Capital a disgrace to the Nation. But there is one glaring weakness in the Senator's bill. He provides that the elected commissioners would have no power to authorize the appropriation of Federal funds. If that is correctly interpreted to mean that Congress would retain the appropriating power for all units of the local government, it would take the heart out of his reform. For the power to appropriate is the power to operate a local government successfully.

Senator Holman's plan is to designate citizens of the District and give them the opportunity to form a charter commission. That commission would bring in plans for a local government to be recommended to Congress. This procedure would have the advantage of laying before Congress a new scheme of local government with the support of the community behind it. But we do not believe that there should be any division as to the best approach. What the city needs is a chance to elect representatives of its own—representatives that would have authority to overhaul the present hodgepodge government and to point the way for future reforms.

We do not expect any plan that is proposed to elicit 100 per cent support from all the people. Nor is it feasible to get a perfect system overnight in a city that has been governed without a shred of democracy for 69 years. We must go step by step toward the reforms that the great majority are seeking. The only alternative is likely to be continued stagnation and neglect because an impossible system thwarts the efforts of even the most conscientious public servants. The workings of this clumsy system to date should stimulate every citizen to rally to the support of the forces that are now working toward its reform.

Sea Lord

Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham is without question one of the great naval figures of our time. The British, not usually given to exaggeration, even go as far as to say that he is "the best since Nelson." Be that as it may, there can be no question that he did a superb job first as commander in chief of the British fleet in the Mediterranean and later as head of the Allied naval forces in the same theater. He has many brilliant feats to his credit, among them the raid on Taranto, which crippled the Italian fleet; the bombardment of Genoa and Tripoli; the great victory at Matapan; the decisive support he gave the British Eighth Army during the El Alamein period of the desert war; and later, and most recently, the remarkably effective use of sea power in the North African, Sicilian and Italian campaigns.

As a man of action, it is doubtful whether Admiral Cunningham would normally be very happy over his new assignment, which is to replace the ailing Admiral Sir Dudley Pound as Britain's First Sea Lord and Chief of the Naval Staff, a post which corresponds to that held by Admiral King in this country. However, as it happens, recent events, such as the surrender of the Italian fleet, have made the Mediterranean a less important naval theater than it has been hitherto. Moreover, the time is approaching when a great thrust or a series of thrusts into Europe from the west will occur. Then Admiral Cunningham will again be in his element. In the meantime, as First Sea Lord, he will be in a position to help in the formulation of the detailed plans which will be made in advance of the coming Battle of Europe. Under the circumstances it is literally true that far from being kicked upstairs Admiral Cunningham has merely been given a job where he can be of even greater usefulness than he was in the Mediterranean

Philippine Problem

President Roosevelt's advice to Congress regarding Philippine independence is a substantial improvement upon the Tydings resolution bearing on the same subject. Senator Tydings proposed that United States sovereignty over the Philippines be relinquished immediately as a counter move to the phoney independence which the Japs are offering the islanders in an effort to turn them against the United States. President Roosevelt suggests that Congress give him authority to advance the independence date (now fixed by law for July 4, 1946) after negotiations to assure protection of the Philippines and the maintenance of peace in the Pacific have been completed.

There would be obvious danger in simply cutting the islands loose while they are occupied by the enemy. But the Filipinos' courageous fight against the Japanese have won for them the right to become masters of their own house at the earliest practicable date. If Congress accedes to the President's wishes, the actual attainment of Philippine independence is not likely to be advanced much ahead of the date now fixed in the law. There is much to be negotiated between the two governments, and a great deal of fighting remains to be done before the invaders can be driven out. But even if there were no question of advancing the independence date, it would still be desirable to reopen the question as to how the islands will be defended once they are free and the Japs have been beaten.

Mr. Roosevelt asks for power to negotiate with the President of the Philippine Commonwealth on "the necessary steps to provide for full security for the Philippines, for the mutual protection of the islands and of the United States, and for the future maintenance of peace in the Pacific." This will obviously involve the use of Philippine air bases by the United States or possibly United Nations forces to prevent future aggression in that part of the world. It is imperative that this issue be settled in a statesmanlike way while the ties between the two governments are close. Independence would be a hollow shell if it were simply cast at the feet of the Jap-dominated islanders without any provision for maintenance of peace in the Pacific.

Meanwhile the Philippine government-in-exile is being subjected to a severe moral test. The Philippine constitution, designed to serve the forthcoming republic as well as the commonwealth, provides that no President shall hold office for more than eight years. President Quezon's eight years will be up on November 15. Under the constitution, he must yield his office on that date to Vice President Osmena, who is also in this country. Some Filipinos fear that their constitution may be put on ice for the sake of keeping the politically skilled Mr. Quezon at the head of the government-in-exile. We do not know whether any such proposal has been seriously entertained, but we are of the opinion that to disregard so vital a provision of the constitution would be a severe blow to the Philippine government on the eve of complete independence. It would probably go a long way in the minds of Filipinos in offsetting the advantages of a new independence resolution.

French Fleet

It is often said that our recognition policy toward Vichy France was vindicated by the scuttling of the French fleet at Toulon on November 27, 1942. This theory has been supported by documents issued Wednesday by the State Department. It is clear from them that both the President and Secretary Hull worked with might and main to prevent any disposal of the ships to the Germans. Did our representations restrain Marshal Petain? Surely, if the answer is yes, it would leave the French Chief of State without a single shred of honor left, since any surrender of the fleet would have been a flat violation of the terms of the Franco-German armistice. Still the record seems to show that Petain at first was sensitive to American pressure and American threats. But as time went on, it is equally apparent, he was so anxious to propitiate the Germans that he left the fleet in a situation and at a station which made the denouement inevitable.

President Roosevelt in his December 20, 1940, instructions to Ambassador Leahy outlined our understanding with Petain's France. He said the most solemn assurances had been received that there would be no surrender of the ships. Rather than give them up to the Germans, the aged Petain had said they would be scuttled. The President asked the Ambassador to remind French naval officers he met of the importance of keeping this pledge. The arguments to be employed were that by handing the vessels to Hitler, Vichy France would "certainly forfeit the friendship and good will of the United States" and that the act would "result in the destruction of the French fleet to the irreparable injury of France." It would, therefore, seem that we did not envisage any destruction of the ships by the French themselves.

But Marshal Petain did not take any trouble to keep the French fleet intact for a future France. This is shown by the situation in which he maintained it. The ships were immobilized for want of oil which, incidentally, was being sent to Rommel in North Africa. There was a standing order to scuttle the ships in the event of attack or attempted seizure not only by Germany but "by any foreign power whatever." Only once did the marshal allow part of the fleet to leave Toulon. This was just before the Allied invasion of North Africa, when Admiral Darlan went to Algiers on a mission to promote Petain's propaganda in French North Africa in favor of collaboration with Hitler. The ships in due course came back and were again immobilized. Clearly there was no hope for them when the Germans swooped down on Toulon. Admiral le Borde, who was deprived of communications with Vichy, merely told his captains to carry out B plan, viz., to scuttle.

Thus there went to Davy Jones' locker a weapon which would have been invaluable for the resuscitation of France. Loyal Frenchmen the world over mourned its loss. And foreigners who can think of no security in Europe without a France restored to sovereignty and health shared their feelings. It is only negative satisfaction that the fleet escaped the Nazi net. There would have been real satisfaction if it could have been put into such a situation and at such a station as would have saved it for service, if not in the cause of freedom, at least in the postwar service of France. We could have hailed such an event as a triumph for our policy toward Vichy.

Tax To Cure

Judge Vinson came off second best in his Ways and Means Committee colloquy on taxes with Representative Knutson. The Minnesotan was trying to find out how the new $10,500,000,000 tax program would serve the battle on inflation. That, of course, is the test, and the only test, of any wartime tax program. "The figures show," he suggested to Judge Vinson, "that only $1,718,000,000 will come from the group receiving two-thirds of the national income, which is the group receiving $3000 a year or less." The judge assented. "Then," persisted Mr. Knutson, "the figures also show that $3,500,000,000 will come from those receiving five-sixths of the national income, or those earning $5000 or less." Again Mr. Vinson accepted the Knutson arithmetic.

These facts furnish the argument of those who feel that the Treasury tax program is inadequate. How are we going to control inflation by letting off so easily, relatively speaking, the people who are getting five-sixths of the national income? Where this program hits hardest is in those brackets which will have to trench upon capital or resort to loans in order to meet the obligations set out in the Morgenthau scheme. That would afford no aid in combating inflation; rather, it would worsen the problem. There must be a much more decisive attempt to reach down into the pockets of those Americans who are receiving the bulk of the "dangerous money." Spending on the part of recipients of war-created incomes is already showing signs of becoming frenzied. Visit any of the big department stores, and you will see evidence of spending sprees. Jewelry purchases—to take one example—are 100 per cent up from last year.

There is no alternative, it seems to us, but to put a brake on this spending and mop up the dangerous money by means of a general sales tax. As far back as January 5, 1942, the President himself envisaged such a levy as a temporary wartime necessity. Yet nearly two years later the Treasury still is unable to shed business-as-usual ideas in tax policy.

Wake Again

What is described as a "strong Pacific fleet task force" carried out a heavy attack on enemy-held positions on Wake Island last Tuesday. Wake—a name that will forever be associated in American minds with the immortal stand of the Marine garrison in holding off an overwhelmingly superior Japanese attacking force for 16 days in December, 1941! Details of the raid are still lacking, so it is not at all clear whether the assault was designed to be the prelude to an immediate invasion of the island or to soften up the Japanese defenses for final disposition later. But in either case the action shows that our fleet is on the offensive. This was the fourth major blow dealt to Japanese outposts in six weeks. On August 30, Marcus Island was attacked; two and a half weeks later assaults were carried out on the Gilbert Islands and on Nauru. It is evident from these moves and from the recent conference of Admirals Nimitz, King and Halsey that something big is brewing in the Pacific, something that the Japanese will not like, something that may bring the war closer to Japan than it has ever been brought before. The carrier program is sufficiently advanced to add to this hope.

FOUR HORSEMEN PASS BY

We will walk through the gate
And close it again,
And the growing sun, the quieting rain
Will never enter this field again.

We will make a path
Through the rippled wheat
Treading the grain-heads, full and sweet,
With soundless stealth, with Indian feet.

We will not return
When the harvest day
Dawns suddenly bleak and winter-grey.
We will never pass again this way.

Executive Session

By Mark Sullivan

Senators Report

ON THURSDAY the Senate met in executive session. "Executive session" means that newsmen were excluded from the press gallery, and the usual official stenographic report in the Congressional Record was on this occasion omitted. Executive sessions are extremely rare. There has been but one before during this war—that was to hear a report for increasing the Navy.

The purpose of the executive session this week was to hear reports from five Senators who have just returned from the battle fronts throughout the world. The purpose of the secrecy was to enable these Senators to tell what they saw with complete candor. The secrecy was justified. Some of what the Senators saw had to do with matters which, if made public, would be of direct military value to the enemy—disposition of troops, war plans and the like. Other matters would be of indirect value to the enemy, for some of what the Senators wish to say had to do with relations of the Allied Nations to each other—such as respective contributions of men and material. If the Senators were to be completely frank, some of what they said might be critical of our Allies. And anything tending to mar good relations between the Allies would be of value to the enemy—especially at this time when the best hope of the Nazis to escape unconditional surrender lies in disturbing the unity of Russia, Britain and the United States.

UNDOUBTEDLY MUCH of what was said in the Senate executive session will later find its way into the press—the public will not be left seriously in the dark about anything important. Diligent newsmen will get a hint here and a fragment there and shrewdly add them together, as is the legitimate function of newsmen. But even if much of what was said is later printed in indirect form, this will do no great harm to our relations with our Allies. For there is a wide difference between an indirect and unofficial report of what is said to have been said, and a direct and official quotation of what was said. Foreign governments know that the American press is free, that some of it is anti-Administration, some pro-Administration, some neither one nor the other, but that all is unofficial. They know that the American Government does not control, and hence is not responsible for what is said in the American press.

This difference between a free press and an official one is material to the relations between the United States and Russia. Some of the concern in America about the intentions of Russia has been caused by utterances made in the Russian press and cabled to the United States. Had these been the expressions of a free press, not responsible to the government, they would have been discounted in America. Coming from an official press which prints nothing that the Russian government does not approve, such utterances have a status that causes concern about the Russian government's present attitude and postwar intentions.

THIS BRINGS up another reason for secrecy of the Senate executive session this week. Some of what the Senators had to say dealt with postwar relations of the Allies—air routes throughout the world, the status of small nations along the European boundary of Russia, the disposition of islands in the Pacific. On such matters some Senators have strong convictions, proper for them to express within the Senate, but containing possibility of harm if officially reported.

There is a reason why the Senate should have more executive sessions. For the Senate apparently is about to do an unusual thing. It is proposed that now, while the war is still on, the Senate should discuss the peace settlement to be made at the end of the war, and the postwar world organization for the preservation of peace. This is in contrast to what happened in connection with the Great War, when the peace settlement and the League of Nations covenant were not laid before the Senate until months after the war had ended.

To the proposal that the Senate discuss the peace settlement now, objection is made—on the ground that in such a debate, statements may be made which may harm our relations with some of our Allies. This objection could be met, and we could get the advantage of advance discussion of peace terms, by having some of the discussion take place in executive session.

Immigration Laws

Now is the time to speak, lest we may have to "forever hold our peace." Congress should amend the immigration laws to forbid any immigration from anywhere, effective immediately, to continue for at least 10 years—20 would not be too long. There are great numbers of persons in the United States, who, whether naturalized or not, group themselves into what are practically "colonies" of other countries; when not claimed outright, are, at least, "counted upon" by the foreign governments, from which they came. Is the United States a nation, or just a hotchpotch? Often, I feel lonely, like a man without a country right here in "My own, my native land."

Wiener Neustadt

By Paul Schubert

Bombings To Come

WIENER NEUSTADT is the first town of any size south of Vienna on the main rail lines. It is a junction point—the secondary line southward via Aspang branches off from the Semmering route which carries the heavy traffic. Through trains, with their racy express locomotives and their international wagon-lits, roar through with shrill tooting of their high-pitched whistles. Humbler locals made up of long strings of small, old-fashioned third-class carriages, wait a long time at Wiener Neustadt station, as if their ancient engines were gathering strength before tackling the long climb to the south.

Before the World War of 1914-1918, Wiener Neustadt's chief claim to importance centered about the activity of the railways.

But when Austria was drawn into the great German gamble of 1914, Wiener Neustadt (partly thanks to its good transportation connections) became an arms producing center. Not one of the largest in Austria, but important enough. Interesting from an historical point of view because in 1918 it had become associated with Austria's small aircraft industry. Wiener Neustadt built planes.

THEN CAME the peace. The Austrian-Hungarian Empire was dismembered. One of Europe's principal powers ceased to exist. And the considerable arms industry which had kept Austria-Hungary's large armies supplied with cannon, machine-guns, rifles, ammunition, aircraft and other necessities of war lapsed into idleness. The buildings stood empty and deserted, their window lights peppered with holes left by the stones of small boys. Their tall chimneys were cold year after year.

Not all these factories were in Austria proper. They were scattered through all parts of the old empire. Czechoslovakia was rich in them. Some of them became the key plants of the powerful Czechoslovakian heavy industry—Skoda at Plzen, Zbroyovka at Brno (creators of the machine gun whose English version became known as the Brno-Enfield, or Bren), and many more.

But no peace industry can use all the plants of a nation geared to war. Many of the old Austrian plants in Bohemia and Moravia lay empty and idle—until the mid-thirties. There was a big one at Blansko, north of Brno. There was another in the forest at Adamov, between Blansko and Brno.

They said the Adamov plant had once made cannon-barrels. It was hard to imagine that, seeing it so still.

About 1934, rather mysteriously, its tall chimney began to smoke. A high fence went up around the Adamov plant. A little later its roof was wonderfully and elaborately camouflaged. A little later signs appeared on all the paths through the forest for miles around, stating the fact that this was a military area—the taking of photographs or the possession of photographic apparatus was strictly prohibited.

LATER STILL troops were quartered in the surrounding villages, and it was understood that there were many antiaircraft batteries concealed all through the woods.

So the arms industry of middle Europe, born of one war, came to life again in preparation for a second.

Hitler, be it remembered, is an Austrian by birth. Whereas most Germans, egotists that they are, think always of Austria (new or old) in terms of contempt, Hitler remembers that Austria-Hungary was once a mighty power, with a great army, and a huge arms industry (whose weapons compared favorably with any others made in Europe).

It is notable that as Hitler schemed his scheme of world conquest, the first part of the world to claim the attention of his greedy eyes was the domain once known as Austria-Hungary. Austria was the first land into which Germany's mechanized armies clanked—Czechoslovakia was the second.

It was the plant of the old Austrian arms industry that beckoned the Fuehrer on. Modern warfare is warfare of production—and Hitler needed all the production he could get.

No sooner had the Germans invaded Austria than Wiener Neustadt began to hum with forced, unnatural activity. Europe was not yet "at war"—except in places like Wiener Neustadt. And when Hitler took Czechoslovakia, all the plants at Brno, Plzen, Blansko, Adamov and all the rest became part of the Nazi war industry.

The full value of these plants made itself felt only when the RAF's air attack on the Ruhr reached its peak in 1943.

How fortunate for Hitler that he had a great war production plant further east, beyond bombing range . . . Transfer the main centers of production to the old Austrian factories . . . Let the bombers blast the Ruhr to rubble—Germany would still be able to fight.

A few days ago, in September, 1943, American bombers based in the Mediterranean area flew over the Alps to bomb Wiener Neustadt, where they now make planes for Adolf Hitler.

If we bomb these places often enough the factories at Wiener Neustadt, Blansko, Adamov, etc., will presently stand empty and idle again, what's left of them. This is the truism underlying the strategy of our Mediterranean campaign.

Brewster Plant

Agnes Meyer's article about the situation prevailing at the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. in The Post makes me wonder what has been allowed to happen to this once free country.

Both management and labor in a vital defense plant have been intimidated and incapacitated to the extent of an estimated 719,337 man-hours, or the time it takes to make 65 military planes, since May 31, 1942. The dictator who has built up this system of tyranny which successfully defies the Government and defeats the war effort is an American of Italian descent—and of draft age!

Several managers have been broken in the effort to combat this system of delay and frustration so carefully built up by Tom De Lorenzo, who justifies his methods by accusing the company of inefficiency. How he hopes to remedy this by sabotaging labor is not clear.

According to Mrs. Meyer, the workers deplore this condition, would rather do an honest day's work than loaf on the job, are patriotic, but feel impelled to obey the dictates of the union. I believe this is true from my own experience with all people of true self-respect. But how can labor hope to win the respect of the country or sympathy for its claims when, but submitting to such a dictatorship, it deprives our soldiers, fighting for the democracy which they exploit, of the arms they need to defend us?

Is it any wonder that so many soldiers who read our newspapers write home letters of bitterness and disillusionment? The story of Tom De Lorenzo is going to be quite an inspiration to them while they are fighting and dying on the beaches of Italy—probably for lack of air coverage of which this "American," by grace of our generous immigration laws, is depriving them!

The article by Agnes Meyer in The Post should do a lot to help clarify the labor mess in other sections, and you are to be congratulated upon your courage and usual alert action in the matter.

Drafting Labor

Under the title, "Conscripting Labor," The Post of September 21 prints a letter in which K. S., the writer, expresses his fear that nazism will sprout and grow here in our own free America if we permit the passage of the Austin-Wadsworth bill; conscription of labor, he says, is the most un-American move that has been made since we entered the war.

The trouble with K. S. and others holding similar opinions is that they have no clear idea either of nazism or of our own institutions. We did not enter the war; we were forced into it by nazism. If we had nazism here, K. S. would go to prison or to the gallows for writing such a letter; nazism knows no Bill of Rights. On the other hand, if he is conscripted as a worker for the defense of our country, he will only be doing his civic duty as an American under a constitutional mandate of Congress. Let us not forget that the rights and liberties enjoyed by us as American citizens impose corresponding duties on every one of us. Too many Americans think only of their rights.

Proper Controls

Do you feel that the obvious tie-up between the blanket deferment of agriculture workers, on the one hand, and the present shortage of essential industrial workers and the threatened draft of fathers, on the other, has been sufficiently observed in the Nation's press?

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics and the Farm Security Administration have made available statistics which show that there is a surplus at present of over one million partly-employed and underemployed farm workers. If it were not for the passage of Public Law 45 and the Tydings Amendment, which latter has cast the draft dodger stigma on agricultural labor, these nonessential workers might be subject to the normal processes of Selective Service, the pressure for father draft could be relaxed, and the loss of industrial manpower to an agricultural scene which requires men only because it looks glamorous to [illegible].

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Railroad Trip—1943

We were going by train. Thirty miles or so. Quite an ordeal these days. The train was to pull out at 3 o'clock. So we got to the station at 2. You can miss a train today by getting there any later. We had our headguards, shoulder harness, cleated shoes and everything, and we had trained for the epic battle, running through the plays of tackle, rehearsing the block, perfecting the straightarm, etc.

* * * *

But something was wrong. We broke from the taxi at the depot, made the entrance to the station and found what seemed to be a hole through tackle, but we were wrong. We ran into a stout defense and lost a yard on the play.

I got up at once, but the wife was knocked out, a victim of illegal clipping. We demanded a penalty, but the station police just laughed and ordered the fight resumed. We helped the wife up. "Where am I?" she asked. "The railroad station," we told her. "Signals!"

I called for a quick-kick smash through center, using the fifteen suitcase play.

* * * *

It was a fumble. We lost the suitcase, a small tan one, but recovered a large black traveling bag and went into a huddle again.

* * * *

"Six-four-eleven-twenty-nine!" called the wife, who had replaced us at quarterback. This was the out-the-door-we-came-in-by-and-in-by-another play, a tricky thing good if it is executed with proper speed. But somebody must have stolen our signals. I suggested a stout man with a briefcase, a duffelbag and two girls, who came down at us from behind. It was a loss of 15 yards. I threw out an ankle in the play. There was time out.

* * * *

On the next play the wife went down the sidelines for 8 yards and I made a perfect pass of the suitcase, but she dropped it. Two commuters recovered it, but it was ruled into our possession as an incomplete forward.

Second Half

We made 10 yards next time, but by this time the 3 o'clock train had left and we decided to take the 4:10 from a less crowded station.

The dash across town was spectacular. We found the mob lined up for the 4:10 too formidable after a couple of running plays, but made the 4:20 on a lower level. It was not going to the place we wanted to go to, but by this time we were pretty groggy. And time was running out.

By a curious fluke we got onto the 4:20. Two or three hundred travelers in front of us got on the 4:38 on the opposite track by mistake. This made it first down and to go, our ball. We rushed to the nearest coach seats and leaned into them. The wife found herself in the lap of a Coast Guardsman. I was sitting on a WAC. The play didn't count. It looked pretty hopeless.

* * * *

Ultimately we got out and hurried across the shed for the 11:23. The destination didn't seem to matter. It was a matter of principle now.

* * * *

The 11:23 had left. It turned out to have been the 10:06 anyhow. Down at the far end of the shed was a bright, new, glistening coach or something. We made for it. It was an Army hospital car on exhibition on track 18.

We got in, climbed onto a white table and asked for immediate treatment.

* * * *

Second Front

The Red Army smashes on with ever-increasing fury against the might of 200 or more enemy divisions. Whenever the Allied forces have landed they have been welcomed as liberators. Every day is proving the overwhelming superiority of British and American arms. Millions more people of the occupied countries will follow the lead of the Italian people. Yet three million or more British and American troops wait impatiently to come to grips with the enemy across a narrow span of water.

Shall we wait until Hitler has had another winter to build even stronger defenses in Europe and consolidate his gains? To wait until the offensive power of the Red Army is spent before striking the decisive blow is to gamble with the lives of our own boys, to say nothing of the millions who may die in occupied countries this winter. The United Nations are engaged in this coalition war and if the honor of our country and Great Britain is to be vindicated we must bear our full share of the load, and throw every potential force into the fight now when our ally is reaching the crescendo of his mighty offensive. In spite of defeatists and appeasers in Britain, I am sure we will invade across the Channel to shorten the war this year. VIRGIL AKESON.

Washington, Oct. 5.

Editor's note: The number of British and American troops in England must, of course, remain a military secret, but from the estimates available the figure, three million men, quoted in the above letter is grossly exaggerated. The argument for a Second Front suggested here has been answered in full on this page. The Post believes that another Dieppe or Dunkirk could serve only the cause of Herr Hitler.

Tax Program

By Ernest Lindley.

Not Rigorous Enough

FROM THE initial reactions, it seems pretty clear that Secretary Morgenthau's newest tax program has accomplished little, if anything, toward restoring the Treasury's tax leadership in Congress. The Administration will have the sharpest difficulties in extracting more than another four or five billion dollars in taxes from Congress.

LINDLEY

At the present levels of national income and prices, another ten to twenty billion dollars in taxes, properly distributed, would not cause severe hardship. To allocate them so as to avoid extreme unfairness to any particular group requires careful study and possibly more, instead of less complicated tax provisions.

The Administration and the Treasury deserve commendation for harping on the essential point that a large part of the cost of the war should be paid out of the current earnings of business and the people. But the Treasury once again has failed to draft a program which applies the principle of heavy taxation all along the line. It proposes to levy still heavier taxes on recipients of medium and large incomes while once again it favors going easy on the taxation of smaller incomes.

The Treasury's program thus tends to confuse the argument and discourage cold and courageous examination of a rigorous tax program.

THE INCOME tax schedules proposed for medium and large incomes are severe by any standard, but probably many in these brackets would bear the burden willingly if comparable standards of taxation were applied to the great majority of the population which lies between them and persons with extremely low incomes. Mr. Morgenthau's statement to Congress recognized that the great bulk of new money, and of inflationary pressure, lies in the lower medium and smaller incomes. Four-fifths of all the national income is going to persons earning less than $5,000 a year.

The Treasury has not yet presented all of its supporting analyses. But on the surface, its program is not intended to draw chiefly on this great reservoir of new money.

Thus the Treasury once again opens itself to the charge of letting politics influence its tax recommendations—even though any scheme which calls for 11 billion dollars in new taxes cannot be regarded as primarily political in character. The Congressmen who want to hold new taxes down are thinking more directly along the lines of traditional practical politics.

THE TREASURY has been somewhat circumscribed by its recent experiences with Congress. It had been forewarned not to ask again for taxation of presently tax-exempt State and municipal securities, or for compulsory joint returns, or for changes in the law governing depletion allowances. It had wasted one of its best-contrived and soundest war tax plans—the spending tax—by presenting it hastily and without adequate explanation.

It has been circumscribed also by its earlier stands on a number of tax matters, including its opposition to the sales tax and to compulsory savings.

Of the main divisions of the Treasury's program, the higher excise taxes on luxuries seem as a group the least likely to arouse widespread opposition. Some of the individual increases proposed may be out of line, and if Congress is really intent upon working a partial alternative to a sales tax, the list of articles to be taxed could be considerably expanded. But the excise taxes outlined naturally will meet strong resistance from some of the business interests directly affected and open the way for a certain amount of log-rolling.

Congressional reaction to the proposed increase of 10 per cent in the corporation income tax has not crystallized at the time this is written. But some further increase in this tax clearly is feasible.

On the congressional side, the main difficulties in obtaining taxation commensurate with the cost of the war program—and our present national income—are due to lack of political courage. The bias of the Treasury and the weakness of Congress combine to frustrate the prospects of getting taxation that is comprehensive and tough, that imposes the hardships which a great majority of civilians are doubtless willing to bear—so long as they feel that all are sharing alike—and narrows the disparity between the contribution of those who are in the armed forces and those who work at home.

Steinbeck Tells Of Grim Hours Off Salerno

By John Steinbeck

Somewhere in the Mediterranean War Theater.—The invasion and taking of the beachhead at Salerno has been very rough. The German was waiting for us. His 88's were on the surrounding hills and his machine guns in the sand dunes. His mines were in the surf and he sat there and waited for us.

There was no other way. He had to be pushed out. And, for a time, it looked as though it might be we who were pushed out. But gradually, what with the naval ships firing and the determined holding out of recently green troops and the coming of our reserves from the sea, the picture has changed. Now the invasion fleet lies in comparative safety off the shore and the beach is secure.

Sea Kind to Invaders

The sea has been smooth during the whole thing. Any storm would have made it more difficult, but the sea has been kind to us. It is as slick as silk and littered for many miles with little twinkling "C" ration cans floating in the sea and glittering under the sun. The water is oily, too, and there are bits of wreckage floating everywhere and all the garbage of this huge fleet, the crates and cans and bottles and debris that men have the ability to scatter about.

Near shore the cruisers and battleships continue to fire, but now their guns are elevated and they fire over the mountains at targets unseen from the sea.

The command ship lies protected in the middle of the invasion fleet. She is a floating radio station. From her all the orders have gone out and to her all the news has come in. And the staffs are brutally tired.

Ship Constantly Bombed

This has not been the usual thing. The command ship has been bombed at constantly. Her crew has been alerted every half-hour in the 24. The bugle is blown and then the boatswain's pipe over the loudspeaker and then the crackling horn that means battle stations. Then tired staff officers have taken off their helmets and their lifebelts and made for the deck for their assigned stations, while the anti-aircraft roared over their heads and the bombs came down and burst the water into the air.

Not many German planes have got through the air cover, but some have and nearly every one was after the command ship. They have straddled her with bombs. There have been near misses that jerked her in the water and it is a wonder her plates aren't sprung.

No Sleep for Four Days

And this has been going on for four days. No one has had any sleep. What has made it even worse, the Jerry planes have been talking to each other on their radios and not bothering to code their messages. They have been looking for this particular ship and aiming for her. They know that if they get this ship they may get the controlling brains of the whole operation.

There are very tired colonels and generals on board waiting for the order to go ashore and establish headquarters. They will feel much better when they are ashore. It is not nice to be aboard the target of the whole fleet. But the command ship has not been hit. Other ships about her have been blasted, but not the command. The feeling aboard has been that the luck is getting pretty thin and that the next one must get her.

Litter Drifts to Sea

Meanwhile, the litter spreads out to sea on little currents. There will be "C" ration cans come ashore for 1000 miles. The litter will coat the shores of Italy.

What has made the command ship's life even more lively is that the Germans have a new bomb. At least, that is the rumor. This bomb is released and then controlled from the plane. It is directed by radio, and if it seems about to miss it can be turned by its master. At least that is what is said. And surely these bombs do not seem to act like other ones. They come down more slowly, and they glow as they come, with something like a phosphorescence that you can even see in the daytime.

When the red signal for an air attack goes out, the destroyers move in circles, belching smoke, and the small smoke carriers dart busily among the big ships, trailing ribbons of white, choking smoke which smells like sulphur.

The little boats weave in and out, until they have covered the fleet with their artificial fog. The sound of coughing is deafening. At least it is until the anti-aircraft starts. And then, through the smoke, you hear the deep blow of the bombs. They don't sound like anything else. And their explosions come through the water and strike the ship. You can feel them in your feet.

The endless lines of landing craft go ashore, carrying the supplies for men who are lying off in the bushes on the forward lines. Cases of food and tons of shells and cartridges. A hell of them lines the shore, waiting to be transported inland.

And the battle line has moved up. The beach is taken now and the invasion moves ahead. The white hospital ships move inshore to take on their cargoes.

Fly Declares Radio Damps Free Speech

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—James F. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, said today that the radio industry, under present policies, does not "allow healthy growth and expansion in the field of free speech," and asserted: "This great, young and progressive industry must not be frozen at any status quo."

Addressing a luncheon meeting of the Radio Executives Club, Fly discussed restrictions on types of programs, on groups who may be heard, and on commentators, and said:

"Those entrusted with the facilities of radio cannot impair the freedom to listen by restrictions imposed at the transmitter end."

Time Sale Barrier Hit

He expressed belief a prime barrier to free speech on the air is a ban imposed by many stations and networks "on sale of time for discussion of controversial issues," declaring this to be "wholly out of keeping with American traditions of free speech which we have maintained for more than a century and a half."

Asserting there recently had been discussions about the policy of a network in regulating the expression of views by its news analysts, Fly said that while personal opinions should not be given in the guise of news, "I can hardly see the reason why they should not be aired" if labeled as opinions.

Free Speech on Radio

"It is a little strange," he said, "to reach the conclusion that all Americans are to enjoy free speech except radio commentators."

He added that "the ban on free comment by news analysts places them and the radio industry at a serious disadvantage vis-a-vis the newspapers and other media."

Programs, Fly said, should not be banned "because they are intended to convey messages," nor because of "the identity of certain groups that request time."

The Gallup Poll . . .

By George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 7.—If Washington is invited to join a permanent four-power military alliance with Britain, Russia and China, the American people would favor such a move, judging by the weight of public opinion today.

A long-term agreement with Britain meets with the most public favor. Almost as many voters likewise favor an alliance with China after the war. As for Russia, the American delegate to the proposed meeting with the Soviets can travel to it with the assurance that the number of Americans who favor a permanent military alliance with Russia is larger than the number who are opposed.

The attitude of the public has been measured in Institute surveys dealing with the question of an alliance with each of the various countries. The most recent study, concerning an agreement with China, put the issue to the voters in the following form:

The vote is:

"After the war should the United States and China make a permanent military alliance, that is, agree to come to each other's defense immediately if the other is attacked at any future time?"

Yes	56%
No	23
Undecided	21

How this compares with the vote on an alliance with Britain and with Russia is shown below:

Alliance With Britain
Yes	61%
No	25
Undecided	14

Alliance With Russia
Yes	39
No	37
Undecided	24

One interesting feature of the surveys is that they do not find particularly sharp differences of opinion by geographical regions. The Midwestern area, often called the most isolationist, is slightly less in favor of a system of American alliances than the average for the country, but the difference is not great.

So far as political parties are concerned, the surveys find that while Republican and Democratic voters agree in supporting the idea of alliances with Britain and with China, they are on opposite sides of the fence so far as alliance with the Soviets is concerned.

	Republican	Democrat
Yes	57%	67%
No	29	19
Undecided	14	14
	Chinese Alliance

Kaiser Chosen Brewster Head; Pledges Action

Henry J. Kaiser, famous as a production genius, was elected president of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. yesterday. He announced in New York that he would assume active management of the company, which is about to be investigated by Congress for its failure to increase plane production for the Navy.

Kaiser, who previously had been elected chairman of the board of Brewster, succeeded Frederick Riebel, jr., Navy trouble shooter, who resigned to accept a special and urgent assignment from the Navy.

In an interview with a representative of The Washington Post, Kaiser made this statement:

"I have had telephone contact with Mr. Tom de Lorenzo, and he has indicated that he will cooperate to the fullest extent with the new management.

"I have every confidence in his assurance that he will do so, and that all the workers of Brewster under Tom de Lorenzo's leadership will show the same intense interest in production that is now existing in the other Kaiser industries."

An article in last Sunday's Post, written by Agnes E. Meyer and since inserted in the Congressional Record, showed conditions in the Brewster plants to be in a chaotic state. De Lorenzo, president of the UAW-CIO Local 365, was described as the "acknowledged dictator not only of the union but of the entire situation at Brewster."

De Lorenzo told Mrs. Meyer that "our policy is not to win the war at any cost."

"The policy of our local union is," he said, "to win the war without sacrificing too many of the rights which we have at the present time."

The House Naval Affairs Committee held a meeting on Tuesday, heard Chairman Vinson read excerpts from Mrs. Meyer's article, and voted to have a subcommittee conduct a thorough investigation of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp.

The subcommittee, which is headed by Representative Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia, will start public hearings Wednesday at 10:30 a. m. it was learned yesterday.

The first witness will be Undersecretary of the Navy Forrestal, who will bring along Navy men who have dealings with Brewster.

Mr. Kaiser will then be called as a witness, and after him Mr. de Lorenzo and other representatives of management and labor.

The subcommittee will hold morning and afternoon sessions until it has made a thorough investigation of the "deplorable" situation at Brewster.

Other members of the subcommittee, besides Chairman Drewry, are Representatives Hebert of Louisiana and Harris of Virginia, Democrats; and Representatives Grant of Indiana and Johnson of California, Republicans.

Rep. Mansfield Asks Real Probe Of Pearl Harbor

By the Associated Press

Calling for a "real investigation" of the Pearl Harbor attack at the first opportune moment, Representative Mansfield (Democrat), Montana, yesterday told the House he intended to see to it the "whole shame-ridden tale" was told.

The Nation, he maintained, was disturbed at the possibility of the Pearl Harbor incident being "hushed up," following announcement by the War and Navy Departments last week that Rear Admiral Husband Kimmell and Maj. Gen. Walter Short, in charge of the Hawaiian defenses, had waived the court-martial.

The cause of the disaster, Mansfield declares, goes "much deeper" than fixing the blame exclusively on Kimmell and Short.

Refugee to Tell Of Norway Invasion

The invasion of Norway will be described for students of Wilson Teachers College by Madame Ase G. Skard, former assistant professor of education in the graduate school for teachers in Trondheim, Norway, at a school assembly today.

Editor of the Norwegian Educational Journal, Madame Skard and her family remained in Norway for a few months after the invasion before they were able to escape. She will discuss the difficulties which her countrymen are encountering in maintaining schools, papers and essential services.

White House Plea

5 Millions More Sought For OWI

President Roosevelt sent to Congress yesterday a request for an additional appropriation of five million dollars for the Office of War Information.

The Budget Bureau estimates said the money was needed "in conjunction with actual or projected military operations" and would supplement five million dollars appropriated last summer for the same purpose.

President Roosevelt's request foreshadowed a revival of the Capitol battles last spring over charges of "political" operations of the OWI.

These charges, denied by OWI officials of both major parties, led to a drastic chopping of the agency's bid for more than 47 million dollars for foreign and domestic operations.

House Appropriations committeemen sliced off about 12 million, and a blasting drive on the House floor trimmed to zero the allowance for domestic operations. OWI Director Davis offered to resign.

The fight was transferred to the Senate, where $3,500,000 of the eight the Administration wanted for domestic work was restored. A final compromise netted the agency $2,750,000 for domestic work, out of an overall total of about $33,200,000.

Army Doctors Halt Meningitis With Sulfadiazine

Chicago, Oct. 7 (AP).—Four Army medical officers said today administration of sulfadiazine by mouth appears to be a safe, effective method of preventing the spread of epidemics of meningococcic meningitis among troops.

Col. Dwight M. Kuhns and Capts. Carl T. Nelson and Harry A. Feldman of the Medical Corps, and Capt. L. Roland Kuhn of the Sanitary Corps, writing in the journal of the American Medical Association, said:

"Sulfadiazine was administered prophylactically to more than 15,000 troops in residence at two posts where meningococcic meningitis was particularly prevalent during the spring of 1943. . . .

"Following the institution of prophylactic therapy the incidence of cerebrospinal fever among the treated individuals dropped abruptly. Only two cases of the disease occurred during a subsequent period of eight weeks' observation."

Philip D. Reed Succeeds Harriman

London, Oct. 7 (AP).—Philip D. Reed, formerly chief of the industries branch of the War Production Board, has arrived in London to take over the post of lend lease expediter which W. Averell Harriman is vacating to become Ambassador to Russia.

Civilians to Get 6% Less Meat Next Year

By Christine Sadler

Post Staff Writer

Civilians can expect 6 per cent less meat next year, John J. Madigan, chief of OPA's meat rationing section, declared yesterday, indicating the only way meat-point values are going is up.

Roy F. Hendrickson, director of the Food Distribution Administration, speaking before the American Meat Institute in Chicago, presented a set of figures that bore this out. America's armed forces and Allies will need eight billion pounds of meat during the 12 months from October 1, he said, and this will leave 17 billion pounds for home-front consumers.

More than half the eight billion pounds will go to the military services, Hendrickson estimated, while approximately 1,715,000,000 pounds will be allocated to Great Britain and 1,507,500,000 to Russia.

Civilian allocations will include 8,500,000,000 pounds of pork; 6,700,000,000 of beef; 906 million of veal; and 586 million of lamb and mutton.

"Any variation from these figures is largely dependent upon the rate of marketing by farmers and ranchers," the FDA chief said. "Rationing of meat supplies is here for the duration."

Cold Storage Eggs Released for Civilians

Nearly 7 million cases of eggs held in cold storage for the Government were released yesterday by the War Food Administration for sale to civilian consumers.

The eggs were accumulated during peak months under a WFA order requiring a major portion of the cold storage supply held in reserve for military uses and for release when egg production declined seasonally.

Wind Fells Hospital Tent, but Operation Ends Successfully

A thrilling story of an operation in a tent field hospital at Salerno with the tent suddenly being leveled by a tornado was told yesterday at Allied headquarters at Algiers by Brig. Gen. Frederick A. Blesse of Washington, chief Army Surgeon in the North African Theater of Operations, Associated Press reported.

"The quick-witted surgeon just had time to whisk the patient under the table as the tent collapsed, General Blesse said.

"The surgical staff moved the patient to another hospital where the operation was successfully concluded," he said.

General Blesse's wife and five children live at 4720 Alton place nw. The general served in the Army Medical Corps in the first World War.

Gas Stations Free to Choose Own Hours, Government Rules

Nation-wide regulations limiting filling station operation to 72 hours a week were scrapped by the Petroleum Administration for War yesterday to permit any voluntary arrangements which may be more desirable to meet local conditions.

In Washington, gasoline dealers pointed out that the revocation of the old regulation will have little effect as few stations have remained open the full 72 hours because of manpower shortages and lack of gasoline.

Necessity Viewed

Although local retailers stated that they will meet soon to "discuss" the matter, belief was expressed that little if any changes will be made in the present situation where many dealers stay open during the time of the day when most cars are on the road.

On another petroleum front, the Petroleum Industry War Council disclosed that "an effective basis of cooperation" has been reached between the armed forces and the Petroleum Administration for War to meet world oil needs.

This arrangement, it was pointed out, is already reflected in the fact that "a larger proportion of petroleum war demands are being taken from other than United States sources during recent weeks."

More Foreign Oil

President Roosevelt told his news conference Tuesday that the changed Mediterranean picture has made it possible to use increasingly more foreign oil to meet war needs in the Italian theater of operations. Senators back from a world tour of battlefronts have said that the United States was supplying more than its share of oil for war.

At the same time authoritative sources disclosed yesterday that an "appreciable" increase in the output of petroleum in the Middle East is expected in the next few months under programs now being completed and extended.

The Petroleum Reserve Corporation, as only one of several forces operating toward increasing Middle East oil production, has already culminated arrangements to expand and equip oil plants in that section of the world for immediate war use.

Chinese Boy Refugee Happy Over Haven Provided by U. S.

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Oct. 7.—A 16-year-old Chinese boy, once a drudge in a Singapore bar and later a dysentery-stricken prisoner in a Jap concentration camp, exclaimed when he learned the House Immigration Committee had approved a bill to grant him permanent residence in the United States:

"That's swell!"

And of Kenneth M. White, a ship's chief refrigeration engineer from Portland, Oreg., who adopted him in Singapore and gave him his name, the boy, Henry White, declared: "He's been more than a father to me and sends money regularly for my support."

Boy "Sold" in Singapore

In halting English, Henry said he has no idea who or where his parents are, but that "they sold me to a pretty bad family in Singapore who ran a cocktail bar."

"Except when I was in school, I had to stay in the house day and night," he went on. "They gave me a cent a day for my allowance.

"Then when I was 13 I met Mr. White in the bar. I told him of my difficulties and that I had quit school. He told me he was willing to take me away and support me and be my dad.

"He took me to Hongkong and put me in the Diocesan Boys Home.

"When the Japs took Hongkong, I was interned with the Americans, British and Dutch. There wasn't enough food—usually we had just fish stew, moldy bread and a bowl of rice each day. Most of the others suffered from beriberi, but I just had dysentery."

Finally, at the insistence of the other internees and White, Henry was evacuated on the diplomatic exchange ship Gripsholm, landing at New York August 25, 1942.

He now attends Belmont High, where he is a member of the Reserve Officers Training Corps. White is with the Army Transport Service.

The House Committee voted to approve permanent residence for Henry at the request of Representative Angell (Republican), Oregon, who said that because of the boy's services as an interpreter Americans interned in Hongkong insisted he be brought to this country.

"MISS ALL STATES, 1943." will be chosen at Washie Bratcher's series of four dances weekly now starting at the Washington Hotel under the sponsorship of the All-States Club. This contest, started in 1941, will probably have more entrants than ever. "Miss All States" will receive a loving cup, jewelry and posies. There'll be fine prizes, also, for her two runners-up. Full details of the contest will be announced shortly . . . The Bratcher dances will flourish from 9:30 p. m. to 1 a. m. on Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays and there'll be Sunday tea dancing from 4 to 7 p. m.

Cal Gilbert, up-and-coming young maestro formerly with Meyer Davis and Emil Coleman, will bring his orchestra to the Statler cocktail lounge on Monday afternoon. Bob Knight leaves the Statler tomorrow night for the William Penn in Pittsburgh.

HILDEGARDE'S DOUBLE, Patricia Bright, opens at Olmsted's Club tonight. When Patricia recently appeared in Boston, Hildegarde was there and for the heck of it, got up and did the number in which Patricia impersonated her. It was an ideal demonstration of the brilliance of Pat's impression . . . Consuelo Flowerton continues to be the Olmsted star, with Hal Yates and Harold Fonville also contributing high-test amusement.

THAT MINSTREL MAN. If we had our way every young singer would take lessons from Benny Fields now at the Troika. Such showmanship! Such arrangements! Such a knack of wringing the last drop of music from a melody! Such gags! When he skidded out on the Troika floor on his opening night, gave the trademarked double stamp of his, all wraps were off! The audience refused to let him go for almost an hour. Benny's been around for a long time but he's still at the head of his class.

The Mayflower's annual "Champagne and Orchids Night" will be celebrated on November 22. This luxury party is always regarded as the opening of Washington's winter season.

CONVERSATIONS. Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, sr., in the Lounge Riviera talking to Pete Macias about the days when her movie star husband, with Marie Dressler, Charlie Chaplin and Mary Pickford, sold Liberty Bonds in Washington in World War I. Pete led the band that went around with the movie stars . . . Major Baskerville, who painted the portrait of the Duke of Windsor, in Mayfair with a group of British officers, all discussing American food. They all voted for Mayfair's ham steak with pineapple and sweet potatoes, seemed to think it terrifically exotic . . . A chat with cordial Otto, maitre d'hotel of the Roger Smith and its Cafe Caprice, who said that his grandchildren took him down to see "Back the Attack" and while it was wonderful, his feet still hurt. . . . Everybody talked all at once at the big party Joe Moss gave for the cast of "The Army Play By Play" at Restaurant "400" yesterday.

WEDDING BELLS are about to ring in Madrillon. Christopher Borras, brother of Owner Peter Borras, will marry pretty, dark-eyed Catherine Heatwold tomorrow afternoon.

Treasure Island will be open on Sundays hereafter. This means a swell new way to build up your week-end to a hectic climax of dancing to Rocco Terrone and Mario Hurtado's Orchestras.

NITERIES INTO THEATER. The Balalaika with its robust Russian revues, lays claim to being the only "theater-restaurant" in Washington. But Denny Beckner and his band in the Victory Room are in a fair way to turn the Roosevelt into a "theater-hotel." The Beckner recipe for a big evening is about 50-50 dance music and vaudeville stunts, but good.

RECOMMENDED WEEK-ENDING. Crossroads and Ralph Hawkins' music on a Saturday or Sunday night. Nothing could be finah in the State of Carolina, or anywhere else . . . It's a lovely ride to River Bend and George Stein's Band is waiting for you . . . Out on the Baltimore bvd. you'll find La Conga with Louis Betancourt's Band cooking up rumbas . . . There's never a person who went to Kavakos Grill who didn't have a grand time. There's a big show and a new Ralph Garren Orchestra . . . The Louisiana over in Georgetown is rocking with the rhythms of Ray King's 13 swing men.

Rails' Net Off in March

Estimated net income of Class I railroads decreased $4,600,000 in August, compared with the same month last year, the Association of American Railroads reported.

The total, after interest and rental, was $84,800,000, compared with $89,243,435 in August, 1942.

Air Cargo Head Named

American Airlines, Inc., has announced the appointment of Ernest C. Miehle as Washington supervisor of air mail, express and freight, according to Herbert D. Ford, traffic manager here. Prior to his Washington assignment, Mr. Miehle represented the airline in Los Angeles.

Mr. Ford stated it became necessary for American Airlines to have a mail, express and freight supervisor in the capital district because of the growing importance of Washington as a center of air mail communication and as an air cargo transfer point.

More Equipment For Rails Urged

Chicago, Oct. 7.—The railroads will meet the peak transportation demands this fall, but not without difficulty, L. M. Betts of Washington, manager of the car service division of the Association of American Railroads, declared today before the Midwest Shippers Advisory Board here.

The reason the railroads will have some trouble in handling the greatly increased load, Mr. Betts explained, is that "they are fast approaching the practical limitations of their transportation facilities even when used to the utmost capacity."

Dr. Sidney L. Miller of Washington, assistant to the Deputy Director of the Office of Defense Transportation, declared that railroads must be allowed to obtain equipment to keep vital traffic moving.

"Although materials must not be diverted from the manufacturer of the tools of war," Dr. Miller went on, "we must not neglect the equipment needs of our railroads. The railroads are seriously in need of more cars and locomotives, and they cannot continue carrying the tremendous load that has been placed upon them for any length of time without additional equipment . . ."

Royal Typewriter Plans Listing on Big Board

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Stockholders of the Royal Typewriter Co., Inc., at their annual meeting here next October 26 will be asked to approve amendments involving wider distribution of the company's common shares and possible listing on the New York Stock Exchange.

E. C. Faustmann, president, told stockholders in a letter mailed with the annual statement that the move was in line with the trend toward broader ownership of American corporations.

The amendments propose to change par value of the common, increase authorized common from 269,704 to 1,078,816 shares and protect existing relative voting rights of preferred stockholders by increasing them.

Sulfa Drug Supply Declared Adequate

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—The Nation is adequately supplied with sulfa drugs and quinine substitutes, members of the National Wholesale Druggists Association were told at their annual convention today.

Disclosing that the total supply of sulfanamide drugs is "much better than last year," Fred J. Stock, chief of the drugs and cosmetics sections of the War Production Board, said he was "optimistic concerning the treatment that will be given to civilian needs."

Knowlton Joins EAL

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker, president and general manager of Eastern Air Lines, announced the appointment of Hugh Knowlton as director of research and postwar planning of Eastern. Knowlton was formerly a partner in the banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

McCarthy Names Russo as Sunday Pitcher

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, Oct. 7.—Joe McCarthy is taking a completely realistic view of his role as generalissimo of the Yankees in this World Series. When those big fortresses dipped over the playing field so perilously close to the big crowd, Mayor LaGuardia was angered to the point of protesting to Army authorities. McCarthy was angry, too. "A thousand persons might have been killed," complained LaGuardia. Complained McCarthy: "My pitcher might have been upset by all that noise."

POVICH

In fact, realism seems to be the keynote of all concerned in the series. Today in the second inning, Pitcher Hank Borowy took a nasty crack on the shins from Danny Litwhiler's line drive back into the box. While the Yankees were gathering around Borowy in mixed panic and sympathy, Umpire Bill Stewart was tending strictly to business with a microscopic inspection of the ball to see if it had been bruised in the collision. Deducing that the ball's condition was not serious, the umpire permitted it to stay in the game.

The Cardinals lost today's game, but they're leading the Yankees tonight. The Cardinal Pullmans are next to the locomotive on the train bound for St. Louis while the Yankee cars are bringing up the rear on the same train.

As if the box score of the second game was not horrible reading in itself for the Yankees this morning, some figure-minded statistician dug up another haunting fact for the Yankees in a morning paper: Only twice in 22 years has the team that lost the second game won the World Series.

Until Bill Johnson broke up the game with his bases-loaded triple in the eighth today, Danny Litwhiler had grabbed the batting honors with the blow that gave the Cards their 2-0 lead. Litwhiler hails from Ring Town, Pa., and was already being dubbed "Brass Ring Danny from Ring Town."

The Yankees have made something of a mess of the preseries script. They were supposed to hit the most homers, and haven't. They were supposed to beat Morton Cooper and didn't. And now they're doing all the base-running the Cardinals were supposed to do and haven't been doing. This now reads like a bad paragraph with a capital L.

Centerfielder Harry Walker of the Cardinals is playing his position as if his contract excuses him from having anything to do with ground balls. He has been death on fly balls and has messed up every ground ball hit his way. He has been playing the grounders as if wary of booby-traps.

Whitey Kurowski hit the home run that beat the Yankees in the seventh game last year, but the Yankees are hard to impress. They are pitching to Kurowski as if they never heard of him, and he has hit only two balls out of the infield in the first three games.

Rookie Alpha Brazle, who came up to the Cardinals from Sacramento, was told that he would get better fielding support in the big leagues, but after those four errors behind him today he doubtless thinks it is just newspaper talk.

Beans Reardon, the National League umpire who worked the first game of the series behind the plate, is the only man among 'em who wears a bow tie with his blue uniform. He wears it proudly, saying, "I'm the only umpire who can tie one."

The Cardinals could have used a little wanderlust on the part of Second Baseman Lou Klein on Dickey's hit into right field in the fifth inning. It was a soft line drive that barely cleared the head of Klein who, for some reason, stood stock still and took the narrow attitude that the ball must come to him if it wanted to be caught.

Johnny Lindell drove the longest ball of the game, a tremendous wallop to deep left-center and made a pretty slide into third base where he found the news was pretty bad. Walker had caught the ball and Lindell was running merely for exercise.

Mayor LaGuardia was at the ball game again today, and so were the Flying Fortresses LaGuardia had squawked about to the Fifth Army Command. When one of the forts dipped low over the field, Joe Blow, of the Idaho Globe, cracked: "Whose afraid of LaGuardia?"

CARDINALS SCORE—Stan Musial, Cardinal right fielder, arrives safely in a cloud of dust at third base on Whitey Kurowski's double in the fourth. Both scored a few moments later on Danny Litwhiler's single for the Red Birds' only runs.

CRASH LANDING AT THIRD—Johnny Lindell, right, Yankee right fielder, is sliding for keeps as he crashes into third base—the Cardinal Third Baseman Whitey Kurowski. The Card infielder dropped the ball and Lindell was safe. The play was an advance from second on a bunt in the climactic eighth inning. Beans Reardon is umpire.

that was too short to permit Lindell to score after the catch, but Stirnweiss was able to move to second on the throw to the plate.

Cardinal strategy called for Brazle to walk Crosetti and fill the bases for double-play purposes on Johnson, who had hit into two double plays earlier in the series. Johnson took one strike and then lashed a line drive toward left center that hopped past the frantic Harry Walker and rolled all the way to the fence for a three-bagger as Lindell, Stirnweiss and Crosetti scurried home in a three-run deluge that put the Yanks ahead, 4-2.

Then Keller Walks

Brazle, after getting a 3-0 count on Keller, semideliberately walked him, and with that he was out of the game. As Right-hander Howard Krist came in to pitch to Joe Gordon, the 69,990 rose in their seats to applaud the dejected figure of Brazle on his way to the dressing room.

Gordon singled sharply to left to score Johnson, and that finished Krist's stay on the premises. Then left-handed Harry Brechen came in to pitch to Bill Dickey, and the Yankees lost another run when Dickey's ground ball, labeled as a single, hit Gordon between first and second. However, Nick Etten drove the fifth run of the inning home with a single to right.

Brazle had a 2-0 lead going into the sixth inning when the Yankees clipped him for a run through little fault of his own. The lad from Cortez, Colo., was seemingly pitching his sixth consecutive scoreless inning when it happened. Borowy had banged a two-base hit into left field off his pitching rival to start the inning, and reached third with one out on Stainback's fly to Musial. Borowy languished there while Crosetti flied out meekly and when Johnson grounded to Kurowski the inning apparently was over, but Kurowski fumbled the soft grounder which Marion would better have handled, and Borowy scored from third.

Litwhiler's Single Counted

Danny Litwhiler, who willingly traded life with the Phillies for a job with the Cardinals in midsummer, provided the big blow of the ball game until Johnson tripled for the Yankees in the eighth. It was a single with the bases full in the fourth that set up the Cardinals in a 2-to-0 lead.

They unloosed a three-hit attack on Borowy in that inning with Musical commencing it with a single to center. Walker Cooper popped out but Kurowski slammed a two-bagger into left field that moved Musial o third. Joe McCarthy ordered the dangerous Ray Sanders walked and then saw his strategy backfire. After Borowy worked Litwhiler to a 2-to-2 count, the Cardinal outfielder walloped a solid single to left to score Musial and Kurowski.

The Cards got no more out of the inning because Yankee strategy worked on another try. After Litwhiler moved to second on the throw-in to the plate, Marion was intentionally passed, bringing up Brazle, who fanned with the bases full, and Klein, who grounded out to Crosetti.

Borowy looked like a beaten pitcher in that fourth inning, but he made a sudden and magnificent reformation to keep the Yankees in the ball game thereafter. The Cardinals abandoned Brazle with those two runs, and Borowy held them to one hit for the remainder of the game.

In fact, Borowy pitched a beaut after that fourth inning. Only one Cardinal reached base against him thereafter. He was Walker Cooper, whose single to right with two out in the eighth was the Cardinals' only hit of the last five innings. Borowy was curve-balling the Cardinals, who hit only two balls out of the infield after the fourth.

When the Cardinals weren't making errors, they were playing very well indeed behind Brazle. Harry Walker moved back to the old running track in center field to drag down Lindell's bid for the longest hit of the game, and Litwhiler robbed Gordon and Stainback of hits into left field.

It was the thrill game of the series thus far, with the Yankees turning in a slick double play in the first inning after Walker doubled and Musial walked with one out. In the second, with a man on base, Charley Keller slid along the left-field wall, stuck his glove into foul territory and made a one-hand catch of Marion's long drive. Joe Gordon kept the Cardinals off base in the sixth with one of his copyrighted, backhand grabs of Sanders' fierce drive toward right field, and threw him out.

Third-Base Crash Seen Vital Play

McCarthy Defends Lindell's Brushing Cards' Kurowski; Losers in Meeting

By Charles Dunkley

Associated Press Sports Writer

Yankee Stadium, New York, Oct. 7.—Hiding behind his spectacles and a big black cigar, Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees, scowled at the reporters in mock anger today with "Can't you guys wait until we get to St. Louis for my starting pitcher in Sunday's game."

There was no answer.

In fact, there was hardly a sound in the clubhouse as the players already had forgotten their 6-to-2 verdict over the St. Louis Cardinals in the third game of the World Series and were busy packing for the trip to the Missouri city.

"Well, it's Russo," McCarthy said. "I may change my mind. If I do I'LL change it."

Chandler Alternate

Marius Russo is a lefthander with a record of 5 victories in 15 starts. He had a sore arm most of the season, but made a sensational comeback in September. If McCarthy changes his mind he probably will switch to Spurgeon (Spud) Chandler, who stopped the Cards in the opening game.

McCarthy had no particular praise for the pitching performance of Alpha Brazle, the gangling St. Louis lefty who held the Yanks in restraint until those blunders behind him in the eighth.

McCarthy defended Johnny Lindell's charging into George (Whitey) Kurowski at third base in the eighth inning, knocking the Cards' third sacker flat and causing him to drop Sanders' perfect throw.

"Kurowski probably was in Lindell's way," McCarthy explained. "He couldn't come in standing up. After all, this game is no pink tea."

Lindell Shaken

Lindell, still rubbing his head, said his jaw came in contact with Kurowski's elbow in the smashing collision. The Yanks' rookie outfielder is a powerfully built youth and came ploughing into Kurowski like a plunging fullback.

The downcast Cardinals shut out all visitors while they held a brief meeting in the clubhouse immediately after the game and by the time reporters filed in manager Billy Southworth was able to greet them with a rather forced smile.

While the players dressed hurriedly and departed, Southworth explained that he considered the turning point of the game to be

Jacobs Seeks Hanbury for Ruffin Match

An offer for Lew Hanbury, promising D. C. lightweight, to meet Bobby Ruffin, recent conqueror of Beau Jack, in the feature bout of an early November Madison Square Garden card, was made yesterday to Al "Weskit" Weill, Hanbury's manager, by Mike Jacobs, New York impressario.

Hanbury, training at Goldie Ahearn's gym for his 10-round bout next Wednesday night at Uline Arena, made two great showings recently in the Garden. He kayoed Gus Levine Coen in five rounds and whipped Frankie Rubino, who had held Harry Jeffra to a draw, on the Ruffin-Jack card, and has become a favorite with Gotham fight fans. Weill, however, refused to accept the match until the outcome of Hanbury's bout with Petro.

Hanbury and Petro, close rivals since their amateur days with Merrick and Police Boys Club, respectively, never have met before. Should Hanbury defeat Petro, as he will be favored to do, and Weill accepts Jacobs' offer to meet Ruffin, Lew will be the second Washington boy to fight in the Garden in the feature spot. George Abrams, local middleweight contender, met Tony Zale for the title there several years ago, losing after a close fight.

Occupy Set To Invade Pimlico Meet

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 7.—John Marsch's Occupy, currently racing's leading 2-year-old by virtue of last Saturday's victory in the Belmont Futurity, probably will have to prove his worth during the 30-day consolidated meeting starting at Pimlico Saturday—if he expects to stay on top.

Nine juvenile stakes have been listed for the Pimlico session, and the nominations for these races indicate that Occupy has some tests ahead of him.

Marsch has nominated his steed for four of the juvenile added-Monday events, including the Pimlico Futurity, the Eastern Shore Handicap, the Oden Bowie and Walden Stakes.

Only two of the nine races are restricted, the Selima to fillies and the Maryland Futurity to Maryland-bred horses.

A possible contender for Occupy's honors is Warren Wright's Pensive, the colt which finished fourth in the muddy Belmont Futurity. The son of Hyperion is eligible for all seven unrestricted events.

Last year the Marsch colt's full brother, Occupation, rolled up an even more impressive record before coming to Pimlico, but ran into Mrs. John D. Hertz's winner, Count Fleet.

Among the other outstanding 2-year-olds which may contest in one or more of the nine stakes are A. C. Ernest's Alorter, E. R. Bradley's B-Nineteen, R. Sterling Clark's Smolesko, Beatrice MacGuire's Bee Mac, Lazy F. Ranch's Cocopet, Greentree's Tampo and Harry LaMontagne's Rodney Stone.

Sammy Baugh Figures to Break All Pass Records This Season

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Post Staff Writer

Samuel Adrian Baugh, who will start a seventh season with the Redskin Sunday when the National Football League champions meet the Brooklyn Dodgers at Griffith Stadium, figures to come out of the year with just about every record in the books in regard to aerial activities.

Baugh, Green Bay's retired passing perfectionists, Arnie Herber, and Cecil Isbell, and Baugh's successor at Texas Christian, Davey O'Brien, dominate the passing records at present, with Baugh the leader. Incidentally O'Brien had his big day against Baugh when Li'l Davey tossed 60 passes and completed 33 for 316 yards, all three league records.

Only Sid Luckman remains of Baugh's serious rivals of the past few years. The Bears' top passer has played two games to date and his five touchdown passes represent his biggest threat to Baugh.

Baugh's efficiency may be impaired this year by a lack in number at least, of capable receivers what with Dick Todd, Ed Justice and Bob McChesney missing from last year's team and Wayne Millner, Charley Malone and others from Redskin squads which helped Baugh to his record performances in the past.

Receiver Question

Bob Masterson Joe Aguirre, Andy Farkas and Wilbur Moore will be Sammy's chief targets this year, plus any of the new crop of ends or backs who may develop with a few league games under their belts.

Baugh, who has missed only one game in his six years with the Redskins has earned the reputation as probably the greatest "one man team" in the history of football. He has completed 11 of every 20 passes for an average of better than 13 yards a pass, and has clicked for 56 touchdown passes. In the kicking department, despite what could be called one bad year, for him, Sammy has averaged nearly 45 yards a boot. Only two of his unbeatable quick kicks have been blocked.

Dodges Punishment

In addition he calls offensive signals and on occasions, when his receivers are covered, the play calls for crossing up the opposition, or he just gets the urge, he is a fair ball carrier. The fine record of Redskins point-after-touchdown artists, particularly Bob Masterson, are helped by Baugh's accurate manner of placing the ball.

One of Baugh's major assets is his ability to dodge punishment and remain in the lineup week after

Birds Win 3d FromChiefs, 7-6

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 7 (AP).—The Columbus Red Birds came from behind twice tonight to defeat the Syracuse Chiefs, 7-6, for their third victory in four starts in the little World series. The defending champions need only one more win to become the first team in history to take the classic 3 years in a row.

Syracuse hopped out front in the seventh, Kelleher doubling to left and coming home on West's triple to right after two were out. Columbus, with two away in its half, romped away to a one-run lead when Mack tripled to center, Antonelli singled him home, and Heath tripled to deep center to plate Antonelli with what proved to be the winning run.

G. U. Prep to Meet Charlotte Hall

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlotte Hall, Md., Oct. 7.—The most inexperienced team in the history of football at Charlotte Hall Military Academy will take the field Saturday against Georgetown Prep.

Coach "Pop" Ehringer has only four veterans left from last year's squad, Jack Mister, end; John Rausch, guard; Bill Bryan and Jerry Heatley, backs. The other seven starters will be chosen from sixteen boys, none however have had a football in their hands until two weeks ago.

Musial reached into the crowd to make a fancy gloved hand catch of Stainback's foul fly in the right field corner, and Borowy raced to third after the catch. Litwhiler took Crosetti's fly in short left and held Borowy on third with a good throw. Kurowski ran over in front of shortstop to take Johnson's grounder and fumbled the ball for an error letting Johnson reached first and Borowy scored. Keller grounded to Marion who stepped on second forcing Johnson.

TODAY'S GAMES—

Tech at Wilson, 4 p. m.
Central at Roosevelt, 4 p. m.
Anacostia at Washington-Lee, 4 p. m.
Coolidge at George Washington, 4 p. m.

GAMES TOMORROW

Western vs. Eastern, 3 p. m., at Central Stadium.
Gonzaga vs. Devitt, 4 p. m., at Western Stadium.

The celler dwellers of the inter-high football series, Central and Tech, come up against tough competition today when they meet undefeated Roosevelt and rejuvenated Wilson, respectively.

In both instances the lower case teams will start on the fields with revised line-ups—Coaches John Jankowski and Duke Stewart evidently operating on the theory that in view of the record a little experimenting won't be amiss.

Hasn't Decided Yet

Jacobs will have different men—he hasn't decided who as yet—at guard, center and halfback for Tech.

On the basis of past performance Central would seem to have a tough row to hoe, for Roosevelt last week decisively defeated Anacostia and Anacostia hand handed Central a shellacking the week before. Roosevelt also has Eastern's scalp hanging from its belt.

Tech, meanwhile, won't be facing a two-time winner, for Wilson lost its opener to the low rated—at that time—Coolidge eleven. But Wilson bounced back smartly last week to hand Central its worst defeat in years and still is considered a strong series contender.

Spot game of the week at Cenuptral Stadium at 3 p.m. which stood up fairly well before the pounding Rough Riders of Artie Boyd in its opener. This will be Eastern's second start ir the local series and there's a lot of interest in how Dick Mentzer's boys will look.

Coolidge vs. G. W. High

Coolidge will meet George Washington High at Alexandria tomorrow and the Conn men aren't too well off on players, since Barry Shields will be out at center and Chick Lang may be unable to start at end. But George Washington isn't in the best of shape either, for several players are out with injuries.

Gonzaga faces Devitt Prep at Western Stadium at 4 p. m. Saturday, somewhat battered by its game with Mount St. Joseph's last Sunday.

Navy Coaches Concede Duke Experience Edge

Tackle Schwartz Out With Injured Shoulder; Jayvees Prepare to Tackle Curtis Bay Guards

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Oct. 7.—Navy's gridiron squad held the first of two night football practices tonight to prime their guns for a blast at Duke's highly-touted Blue Devils Saturday night.

Playing the second night game in its history, Navy opens its clash with the Devils in Baltimore's Municipal Stadium at 7 p. m.

Reporting pre-game estimates of a capacity crowd, Navy athletic officials said that while sales are brisk, "there are still plenty of tickets to be had."

The Tar coaches, meanwhile, said today that they would have to do without the services Saturday of Walt Schwartz, a right tackle who has been in the starting line-ups in the two previous games.

Schwartz, who was out with an injured shoulder today, had replaced veteran Ed Elliott, who sprained his right knee in preseason practice.

Staubitz Probable Starter

So, the probable starter at the right tackle slot against Duke will be Al Staubitz, a 180-pounder from Cincinnati, Ohio, and said to be a good, fast man.

Claiming that Navy didn't have an even chance against Duke, because the Devils had a far more experienced line, the Middie coaches, nevertheless, conceded that the Tar backs would give Duke Coach Eddie Cameron's players quite a bit to think about.

Navy's Line Coach E. E. (Rip) Miller ventured the opinion that we'll be in there giving them a fit, and you can bet on that."

While the Navy varsity was shaping up for the Saturday game, the junior varsity prepared for a clash here tomorrow with the team from the Coast Guard yard at Curtis Bay.

Frank Foster, Jayvee coach, admtted today that his team was playing a group "a little bit out of our class."

Claiming only inexperienced players from high school teams, Foster said that the Coast Guard was expected to put on a real show tomorrow.

Probable lineups:

Duke.	Position.	Navy.
Clitadino	L.E.	Channell (C.)
Preston	L.T.	Gillooly
Milner	L.G.	Brown
McCain	Center	J. Martin
Myers	R.G.	Chase
Naani	R.T.	Staubitz
H. Smith	R.E.	Johnston
Long	Q.B.	Dwyer
Luper	L.H.	Hamberg
Blount	R.H.	B. Martin

the play at third base in the eighth inning when Lindell crashed into Kurowski.

"That changed the whole complexion of the inning," Billy said. "If he had held the ball it would have been one out and a man on first. We made the same play on what's his name, Stainback, in the first inning."

Harry Walker's error just before that play was less important as Southworth saw it. "Dix played the ball right," he insisted. "You can't blame the kid at all."

Refusing to name his fourth game pitcher until the club reaches St. Louis, although he said he already had made up his mind, the Cardinal manager added that he was well pleased with Alpha Brazle's hurling today. He refused to answer a question as to whether Ernie White figures in his pitching plans.

"We're not down. I can't emphasize that too much," Billy concluded. "When you win you can pop off; when you lose—well."

week. Although afforded excellent protection, Sammy, a rangy, quick-thinking fellow, can maneuver himself out of the way of hard-charging linemen intent on breaking up his passes.

Already holding records for efficiency for a season and lifetime, yardage for the same periods, completions and second in touchdown passes, Baugh may top all departments by December if he can hit upon a ball game to break O'Brien's marks. It appears as though Sammy will be forced to play more than his usual half-game this year to keep the Redskins in title contention and that will be in his favor.

Plan to Defer Fathers In U. S. Service Failed

The White House, it's reported on good authority, turned down a plan submitted by the War Manpower Commission that would have had the effect of deferring temporarily pre-Pearl Harbor fathers in the Federal service until after the supply of fathers in nonessential jobs had been exhausted. Furthermore, it's said that the White House is insisting on a stiff deferment policy in the Federal service, and in this respect WMC's deferment committee has been supported. Several agencies have appealed to the President over the rigid standards set by the deferment committee, including Justice and Interior Departments.

KLUTTZ

However, War Manpower and Selective Service officials are working on an alternative plan that would give fathers in Government a break. The President is said to have become interested in the controversy and it's reported that he'll make a clarifying statement on how the draft will affect Federal workers. The statement may come today, or at his Tuesday press conference. The hope now is to put fathers in Government on something approaching an even footing with fathers in other essential industries. What form it will take was undecided late yesterday but some of the officials favored the use of replacement schedules. These schedules already are in use at the Navy Department, Tennessee Valley Authority, and several other agencies.

The replacement schedules give agencies and the fathers a chance to plan. It's a process of orderly withdrawal of manpower. So many fathers would be called each month. The fathers would know when their numbers would come up, and in the meantime the agency could train people to replace him. The same sort of a system can be used for all male employes of draft age. This would put the draft in Government on a sensible basis. The Federal Government is one of the 35 "essential" industries as listed by War Manpower, and technically people in nondeferrable jobs and nonessential workers are supposed to be drafted before essential workers are taken. However, Government officials know full well that local draft boards will pay no attention whatever to the ruling. That's why automatic deferment of Government fathers was sought. But it wouldn't be good politics in light of what has taken place within the past three weeks on Capitol Hill.

The House-approved bill which would permit Federal Housing to insure 400 millions additional in private war housing is stymied in the Senate, where a hot cloakroom battle is in progress over the racial issue. GOP Minority Leader McNary introduced an amendment which would prohibit racial discrimination in FHA-insured projects. The meaning of such an amendment has legal experts confused, but apparently no private builder could construct an FHA-financed home in an area restricted to whites. The fight may be taken onto the floor, if McNary insists on an amendment. However, an effort is being made to kill the amendment in committee.

The Federal Works Agency has made something of a mess of the Capital Garage project for the simple reason that it hasn't been able to compel other Federal agencies to keep their cars in it. Of course the agency know that before it took over the huge downtown garage, but now it's planning to sponsor legislation which would give it the authority to force other agencies to keep their autos in a central place. Arthur J. Williams, recently appointed secretary of the Maritime Commission, is expected to resign as president of the Welfare and Recreational Association.

National Federation of Federal Employes, the oldest Federal employe "white-collar" union, has voted to start an immediate drive to increase the paychecks of Federal workers. The executive council of the union, which closed a four-day meeting here yesterday, stated that Federal workers were in a "desperate economic plight" due to the sharp rise in the cost of living. The council made no specific demands, but it went on record against the present method of computing overtime pay, and it asked for "honest overtime," full time and a half. Federal workers now get a little more than straight time for work over 40 hours.

Written Report On Ill Defendant Ordered by Court

A written report on the physical condition of Edna E. Gray, 61, Negro, under three indictments charging the performance of abortions on young women, was ordered yesterday by Justice Matthew F. McGuire in District Court.

Justice McGuire ordered that three physicians examine Mrs. Gray and submit their report as soon as possible so that a trial date can be set for her. In July, the court was informed that Mrs. Gray, suffering from hypertension and diabetes, was too sick to withstand a trial during the summer.

Attorneys for Mrs. Gray told the court she is partially paralyzed and unable to leave her bed. She is under $10,000 bond.

Rally Stresses Brotherhood In War Fund

"We are coming to live more in other people's backyards, and so we must cultivate the art of neighboring."

The rally was held to dedicate the theme of the 1944 fund, "Crown thy good with brotherhood," and, according to Coleman Jennings, Washington drive chairman, "to dedicate ourselves to this campaign."

Participating were presidents of men's civic clubs in the Washington area, fund leaders, and representatives of each branch of the men's and women's armed forces, including Chief Boatswain's Mate Victor Mature, formerly of Hollywood.

It was the largest campaign rally to be held in Washington since the fund was launched here Tuesday night, and the first at which all divisions of the fund were represented.

Presiding was Raymond Garrity, president of the Washington Kiwanis Club and chairman of the joint clubs committee, who voiced confidence that Washington's $4,800,000 quota would receive at least 100 per cent support.

Jennings Introduced

Asserting that the campaign this year "is better organized than it ever has been," Garrity introduced the leader of Washington's thousands of volunteer workers, Coleman Jennings.

Jennings, who later at the luncheon received the V-Man of the Week award from the Junior Board of Commerce for "his great aid and leadership in community fund raising," told of the increased needs on all fronts which have necessitated a 20 per cent quota increase this year.

Calling for a "free will, sacrifical offering which expresses our brotherhood," Jennings declared, "the acid test in this city of what we feel for the three fronts dependent upon the Community War Fund is how much we are going to sacrifice."

Entertainment was offered by Robert Nicholson, Australia's "outstanding baritone," and Glenn Carow, Washington pianist.

Only fund meeting scheduled for today will be for District A workers of the Metropolitan Division, who will meet with Mrs. Harold N. Marsh, vice chairman, at 2400 16th st. nw. at 1 p. m.

City News in Brief

An inventory completed yesterday at Frank's Jewelry Store, 812 F st. nw., disclosed that $2216.70 worth of jewelry was stolen October 3, when a display window of the store was smashed, police reported. The loot included watches and rings.

Grand Opera Organizes

Organization of the Washington Grand Opera Association, which will present the first in a series of performances at Constitution Hall December 8, was announced yesterday by William Webster, Washington tenor and manager of the group.

Among the operas to be sung are Cavalleria Rusticana, at the opening performance, and Pagliacci, La Traviata and La Boheme. Mail and phone orders are being accepted at offices at 1719 19th st. nw., DUpont 3183.

$440 Stolen From Grill

Wilson's Grill, 1916 4th st. ne., was broken into early yesterday and $440 stolen from a linen cabinet in the kitchen, the owner, Joseph William Wilson, reported to police.

Police said the grill had either been entered with a duplicate key or that the thief was hiding inside when the place was closed for the night.

Unclean Restaurants Reduced 50% in Three-Month Drive

By Joseph Paull
Post Staff Writer

The recent newspaper campaign to rid Washington of dirty food establishments has caused a decrease of exactly 50 per cent in violation in the last three months.

The health campaign was begun in July by The Washington Post.

Edward W. Thomas, assistant corporation counsel in charge of the Municipal Court office, said that in his opinion, the improvement is due to (1) the notoriety unclean restaurants have received through publicity and (2) the resultant drive of the Health Department.

Cases Dwindling

Thomas said health inspectors had informed him it was becoming increasingly difficult to find violations.

The monthly figures on court cases follow:

June—84 cases.
July—79 cases.
August—108 cases.
September—54 cases.
October 1-7—11 cases.

Dr. George C. Ruhland health officer, also praised the health drive.

"Thanks to the campaign waged by the newspapers and the efforts of the staff under Dr. Ashworth of the Health Department, the number of violations of the sanitary code which it has been necessary to bring into court have dropped considerably," he said. "However, the present condition can be maintained only by constant vigilance by the public and by officials."

Enforcement Tightened

In other ways, enforcement of health regulations has been tightened since the beginning of the campaign.

Collateral minimums on violation have been raised to $50 where prior to publicity it was $10. The increase has brought to court many operators who might have forfeited rather than face charges.

The average fine has been raised from less than $20 to more than $40 by judges who have announced cooperation with the campaign. One restaurant owner was fined $250. The maxixmum is $300.

After a year in which no cases had been reviewed by it, the Board of Licenses was induced to hear nine cases of restaurants charged with violations serious enough for revocation of licenses. The board last month recommended that the license of one operator be revoked and the license of the other eight suspended for periods of two or three weeks. All the operators appealed the decisions, and the District Commissioners now have the cases under advisement.

Offenses Still Severe

On the other side of the ledger, it is apparent from court cases that the severity of the offenses has not decreased.

A recommendation made on September 5 by Thomas that penalties for restaurants and other food dealers be equalized with a maximum fine of $300 and a three-month jail sentence has not been acted on.

Meanwhile, two restaurateurs were fined yesterday by Judge Thomas D. Quinn.

Carl Jones of 1737 Connecticut ave. nw. was fined $75 on charges of having dirty eating utensils and glasses.

William Bass of 2811 14th st. nw. was fined $50 on charges of having in an icebox decomposed pork cuts unfit for human consumption.

Woman Accused in Mail-Theft Inquiry

United States Secret Service agents' drive against an "epidemic" of apartment house mail-box thefts moved another step forward yesterday as Julia Nellie Turner, 31, of 1912 Temperance ct., was held under $5000 bond after arraignment before U.S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on charges of stealing and forging Government checks.

George Green, 44, whose address was given as 109 16th st. se., was put under $1000 bond on charges involving forgery on a commercial check.

Secret Service agents said the woman had been identified by merchants who cashed some of the stolen and forged checks, and that they believed handwriting comparisons would link her with a dozen or more forgeries extending back over two years.

The checks, according to the agents, were stolen from apartment house mail boxes on R st. nw., between 14th and 17th sts.

It was in this same area that checks were stolen by five juveniles apprehended last week and now in the custody of their parents awaiting court action.

Agents said they had found no connection between the operations of the woman and the juvenile gang, however.

Two D. C. Schools Face New Problem

Painter's personal check.

At Stanton School, an old four-room structure built for 160 children, 410 pupils are taught in shifts. A new temporary is being built to take care of pupils now enrolled in regular sessions, but children from Alabama Gardens, due to open October 15, and from 200 other units to be ready soon, will put Stanton back on a shift basis, Miss Painter said. Furthermore, it is not known when the new building will be ready.

In addition to classroom crowding, Patterson is taxed to find play space for pupils. The Board of Education has recommended removal of a house located on school property and grading of this land for a play space.

Another Airline Would Link D. C. With Ottawa

Direct air service between Washington and Ottawa, the Canadian capital, is proposed in an application of Colonial Airlines, filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday.

An application for passenger-mail-express service between the two capitals had been made previously by American Airlines.

Colonial's application envisages a schedule serving Harrisburg, Pa., Binghamton, Syracuse, Watertown and Massena, N.Y., and Ottawa, with an alternate route via Lancaster and York, Pa.

Serving the route New York-Montreal at present, Colonial also asked for service between New York and Ottawa and pointed out that its new routes would bring air transportation to the cities of Massena, Watertown, Binghamton, Lancaster and York for the first time.

Rev. A. J. Wycislo To Handle Polish Near East Relief

The war relief services of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, 1312 Massachusetts ave. nw., yesterday announced appointment of the Rev. Aloysius J. Wycislo of Chicago to direct the establishment of welfare centers in the Near East for Polish war refugees.

The Most Rev. Edward Mooney, chairman of the board of trustees of the war relief services, in making the announcement, said that Father Wycislo will leave for his new post soon.

McCarran Offers Vote Plan for D.C.

7 Commissioners With Power to Pick City Manager Presented in Bill

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

Franchise for the long voteless, District, by electing a board of seven commissioners empowered to appoint a city manager, was presented yesterday in a resolution by Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee.

Immediately referred to the committee for action, the measure would divide the city into seven wards with one commissioner elected from each. The board in turn would appoint a manager for a 6-year term at $20,000 annually, subject to Senate confirmation.

McCarran later revealed that he would head the special subcommittee chosen to consider the matter, and that members are Senators Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland; Overton (Democrat of Louisiana; Barton (Republican) of Ohio, and Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota. Hearings will begin immediately.

65-Year-Old Act

Climax of 10 months of intensive study by the McCarran group, the resolution would repeal the 65-year-old act, under which the Capital is governed today, granting the city a three-man board of commissioners.

Under its provisions Congress would retain the power to make appropriations and all ordinances granted the commissioners would be subject to congressional veto.

A commissioner would be paid $8000 a year and required to be over 25, a bona fide resident of Washington for three years prior to his election, and a resident of his ward for at least one year.

The resolution came as a surprise on Capitol Hill, in the wake of the recent investigation of Gallinger Hospital, which renewed interest in local suffrage. Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon, head of the subcommittee probing Gallinger conditions, earlier this week had suggested a measure to form a charter commission by which Washingtonians could express their choice in administration.

Election Machinery

Informed of the McCarran resolution, Holman said he had had no opportunity to study its provisions but that he was confident both he and the Nevada Senator were seeking the same goal.

Machinery for the election, under the proposed measure, would be handled by a commission consisting of the District assessor, the corporation counsel, and the director of the Bureau of the Census of the Department of Commerce, all of whom would serve without pay.

Each Commissioner would be entitled to clerical assistance totaling $5000 annually, including a secretary at not more than $3600, and in addition would be furnished with office supplies of $300 and postage of $300 each year.

Division of the city follows the lines of tracts established by the Census Bureau, with wards alloted as follows:

Ward 1—Tracts numbered 78 through 85, 88 through 91.

Ward 2—Tracts numbered 63 through 77 and 96.

Ward 3—Tract numbered 62.

Ward 4—Tracts numbered 45 through 51, 58 through 61 and 86.

Ward 5—Tracts numbered 22 through 24, 31 through 35, 87 and 92 through 95.

Ward 6—Tracts numbered 17, 19 through 21, 25 through 30, 36, 37, 43 and 44.

Ward 7—Tracts numbered 1 through 16, and 18.

District residents eligible to vote are defined by the resolution as those who have attained the age of 21 are citizens of the United States and have lived in the District for at least one year.

Legislation promulgated by the Commissioners already granted by Congress and by this resolution transferred to the Commissioners become effective in accordance with the respective acts of Congress granting such authority. Other laws become effective by these means:

1. When approved in writing by the respective chairmen of the House and Senate District Committees; or

2. When not disapproved by either chairman within 15 days after transmittal of an attested copy; or

3. When approved by concurrent resolution in the two houses of Congress, or when a concurrent resolution providing for disapproval shall have failed to pass in both houses.

Citizens Hear Capper

Calling the Senate investigation of Gallinger Hospital "a commendable piece of work" which shows the lack of responsibility of the District government to its people, Senator Capper (Republican) of Kansas last night said Congress itself often causes inefficiencies in District institutions by failing to make laws and appropriations.

He spoke before the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association, which unanimously indorsed the constitutional amendment being sponsored by Representative Sumners (Democrat) of Texas and Capper himself in the Senate providing for District suffrage

The association voted to protest prospective closing of the Oyster School kindergarten of 20 children in compliance with a District ruling requiring that such classes must have an enrollment of 23. They asked time to investigate with a view to finding three more youngsters to fill the roster.

Bottoms Up

River's Flip Causes Bad Water Taste

The reason the District's water tasted that way during the past few days was because we were drinking water from the bottom of the Potomac instead of the top.

That's what officials of the Washington Aqueduct said yesterday—that the Potomac River, source of our water supply, turned over. The bottom came to the top and was drawn into domestic consumption channels.

The natura phenomenon was explained by Humphrey Beckett, superintendent of the Water Department, as a "seasonal turnover." It is caused by the water in the river bed rising to the surface when surface water is forced down by cool temperatures.

Dr. George Ruhland, District health officer, stated the offensive taste in no way harms the drinker.

Flip-flop of the fater, said Beckett, results in microscopic animal growths entering the water system. A similar condition is to be expected again in the spring when vegetable growths influence the taste of the water.

Officials stated the existing condition will continue until local temperatures are equalized.

Holman Gives Suggestions For Gallinger

Exchange of top personnel between municipal institutions after five-year periods and suspension of Civil Service regulations so that superintendents could regulate employment were recommended yesterday by Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon in a report on Gallinger Hospital to the Senate District Committee.

Reiterating that he plans to introduce a resolution to organize a charter commission granting District residents the power to choose the kind of administration they desire, Holman declared, "I doubt if any real and lasting reform in the conduct of Gallinger Hospital will ever be effected until the government of the District is revamped so that it becomes responsive to the needs of the people."

The Oregon Senator's report, addressed to Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee, was the first from the investigating subcommittee to reach McCarran's desk. The other two, from Senators Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota and Buck (Republican of Delaware, are expected to be completed within the next day or so.

Holman's survey stated: "It was my observation that those parts of Gallinger Hospital which were inspected by me were untidy, generally unclean and in some respects insanitary. There appeared to be a spirit of careless indifference to the condition of the facilities and equipment of the hospital and inexcusable unconcern about the welfare of the patients.

"The food was carelessly prepared and indifferently served and the condition of the kitchen and its facilities left much to be desired. It was obvious that too large a proportion of the food prepared for the sustenance of the patients was converted into garbage because it was returned from the wards untasted or only very partially consumed by the patients.

"There was a noticeable absence of discipline throughout the institution, which involves the conduct of the attendants and that of the patients. There seemed to be a total absence of epirit de corps. What is anybody's or everyone's business is obviously nobody's business.

"Obviously Gallinger lacks adequate facilities to care properly for the number and kind of patients which it is required to accept; the equipment is inadequate and in some respects obsolete and the number of attendants in several categories is insufficient for the task involved and the qualifications of some of them, at least, substandard.

"Under the thought that 'a new broom sweeps clean,' it may be advisable to cause to be transferred or exchange between hospitals of similar activities, at least after not to exceed five years continuous service in the same position at the same institution, those persons in major employments and greatest responsibilities.

"For the duration of the war and six months thereafter the rules and regulations governing the Civil Service should be suspended and the superintendent of Gallinger be empowered, under his own responsibility, to regulate all employment problems under his authority."

Equipment Lack Delays 3 Hospitals

New Institutions In D. C. Suburbs Otherwise Virtually Ready for Service

Three suburban hospitals, built in nearby Maryland and Virginia with Federal funds to relieve the hospital shortage in Washington, now are virtually completed, but cannot operate because of the difficulty in obtaining necessary equipment.

The hospitals, which have a normal capacity of 100 beds each and in an emergency can go to 135, have been built in Arlington County, Va., Cheverly, in Prince Georges County, and Bethesda, in Montgomery County, Md., by the Public Building Administration under the Lanham Act.

PBA officials said yesterday that except for minor interior work, both the Cheverly and Bethesda hospital buildings are ready and the Arlington hospital nearly so. Work on the Arlington building was held up for several weeks through difficulty in obtaining labor, it was said.

P. L. Hein of the Emergency Operations Unit of the FBA said yesterday that they had had little trouble in getting priorities on construction materials or the electrical, plumbing and heating equipment for the hospitals.

"Our difficulty," he said, "has been in obtaining highly technical equipment needed for the operation of a hospital, such as beds, metal cabinets, special and emergency lighting equipment, X-ray machines, furniture and laundry and sterilizing apparatus. We have, of course, a high priority rating for the equipment, but the Army and Navy and the Merchant Marine need that equipment, too, and they come first."

The hospitals are being constructed by the Government, at a cost of more than $500,000 a piece, with the understanding that upon completion, they will be leased to the respective counties, to be operated by the county authorities.

Supervisory staffs of the hospitals have already been named, and superintendents of both the Montgomery County and Prince Georges hospitals are now accepting applications for other positions on the staffs, it was said.

Victory Sidelights

Red Cross Warns of Flue Fires

In connection with Fire Prevention Week the Red Cross reminded the public to take special care preparing the first furnace fire in the fall.

"Any fireman will tell you that chimney fires are most frequent then," the statement said in enumerating some of the 100 fire hazards stressed in Red Cross accident-prevention courses.

Among the most frequent causes of fire the Red Cross listed burning of trash in the yard without putting it in a metal container to protect the neighborhood from flying sparks; building of a new fire on the bed of old fire, which may result in an "overheated furnace;" failure of having a competent electrician check all wires and appliances, and keeping uncovered gasoline in a room which has a burning gas jet or fireplace.

Cryptically ending the statement, the Red Cross finally cited "cigarettes period."

Twins Donate Ambulance

Millard and Frederic Pryor, 10-year-old twin sons of Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Millard H. Pryor, 3900 Alton pl. nw., have donated $1529 for an Army ambulance, the War Department announced yesterday.

In a letter to the War Department, Mrs. Pryor said that the boys would soon visit the Pentagon building, where Maj. Gen. J. A. Ulio, adjutant general, would formally accept the check and show the boys the type of ambulance that they purchased.

Memphis Belle in Spokane

The Memphis Belle, famed Flying Fortress that figured in nine months of aerial warfare over France and Germany, is "resting comfortably" after a major operation at Spokane, Wash.

Her "face lifting" was performed that she might again help defeat the enemy—not as a hard-hitting bomber, but as a training plane for fledgling airmen.

The Belle returned to this country last June and after a national tour was assigned to a training group.

Today's Social Notes

(From The Truthtown Torch)

A clever plan to promote enlistments in the women's branches of the armed services has been announced by Mrs. Rufus Rossiter Antelope, chairman of the recruiting drive being conducted by the Ladies' Parachute Patrol.

"The key to the whole situation is hats," said Mrs. Gilderlyly yesterday. "No woman is going to join anything or do anything so long as she must wear an unbecoming hat. I am sure that is the reason many women have not reenlisted in the WACS. They happened to have the wrong kinds of faces for the WAC hats. Also many of the women in the WAVES, SPARS, MARINES, etc., are not en rapport wtih their hats.

"My plan is to set up a millinery division at our recruiting headquarters. Here the hats of all the services will be on display and potential recruits may come in and try them on. Only in that way can each woman decide which service offers the most becoming hat to her type of face and she can make her enlistment accordingly."

Mrs. Lucius Gilderlyly, recently turned farmerette, is back from her estate, Emerald Acres, which she turned into a farm last summer and operated herself in the interest of the food cause. Mrs. Gilderlyly will be pictured next month in a national magazine driving her own tractor and gathering beans, tomatoes, etc. (Costumes by Mme. Snitz). She was assisted in her farm activities by her farm superintendent and a corps of agricultural experts. Mrs. Gilderlyly also will be pictured beside her stores of canned goods, the canning of which done by the Gilderlyly servants, supervised by a home economics expert.

How to Be Everywhere At Once

Another way of simplifying the lives of women active in war work has been devised by Mrs. Montclair St. Vitus, Truthtown's ace career and project woman. Mrs. St. Vitus, who heads a dozen or so war activities and business enterprises, has just added to her staff what she calls a "stand-in" secretary, to represent her at the secondary places and events she is unable to get around to in her daily activities.

"My stand-in secretary will function much as does a movie star's double," Mrs. St. Vitus explained last night. "She will attend weddings, cocktail parties, etc., of the lesser fry, represent me at the smaller civic and club luncheons, go to the second rate concerts I am supposed to honor with my presence, take to lunch the duller persons to whom I owe luncheons, sit on the platform for me at suburban civic gatherings, occasionally attend church for me, and always represent me when some earnest reformer calls together a group of the representative women of the community."

Besides her personal maid and chauffeur, Mrs. St. Vitus already has a social secretary, an office secretary, a handbag secretary, and a personal shopper. "I feel it is every woman's duty in wartime to simplify her life," she said.

Patriotic Gesture

Mrs. Wynkoop Bigwigger has decided to do her bit in easing the housing shortage. She has announced she will rent one of her three guest rooms in her mansion on Uppercut Drive. While she would prefer an admiral or at least a rear admiral, she might under certain conditions accept a commodore. "I am limiting my choice to the Navy," she said, "because I think a high ranking naval officer will give a pleasant nautical touch to my home in wartime."

The Same Road

Seen everywhere together these days are Mrs. Rosewell Clymer and Mrs. Mortimer Hazlewit Tinfoil, whose recently attained social recognition here has been phenomenal. Instead of treating Mrs. Tinfoil as a rival, Mrs. Clymer contrary to general expectation, has become her best friend. The two frequently entertain together and are usually put on committees together.

Mrs. Tinfoil has made many excellent social connections through her untiring war work and in the course of a year has advanced from an obscure member of a suburban bandage rolling group to coordinator of organization activities for the Ladies Parachute Patrol. Mrs. Clymer similarly has advanced from head of a committee in a State society to president emeritus of the Best Board.

Pancakes Are an Ideal Supper Dish

Pancakes can be used for other meals than breakfast. Try making supper ones, using ham as a filler. This is both a nutritious and appealing dish. The recipe for these pancakes follows:

SUPPER PANCAKES

Beat 2 eggs, add 2½ cups milk and mix well. Sift together 3 cups flour, 2 tablespoons baking powder, 1½ teaspoons salt and ½ teaspoon dry mustard. Add to the liquid mixture, stirring until flour disappears. Add 1-3 cup melted fat which has been cooled and 1 cup All-Bran. Dip separately 15 thin slices boiled ham or cheese into the batter and on hot griddle, turning only once. Makes 15 cakes 5½ inches in diameter.

STALEMATING WINTRY BLASTS

By Ruth Gregory

Shades of antimacassars and feather boas! Woolen stoles, shawls and hug-me-tights are back again. More varied and more colorful than ever.

This is another one of those fashions sprouting right out of wartime shortages. Less heat in houses, far from stymying fashion, has stimulated it. Fur-lined coats and jeweled wool jerseys have been headlined as wartime fashion prodigies. Now grandmother's shawl has been trotted out of the attic and stuffed down wartime winter's throat.

Some throat, too, when you consider the dire warnings of WPB regarding the fuel situation. That's one of the reasons we're talking about these head and neck warmers right now.

That filmy shawl in the photograph looks like it might be made of lace. Actually, it's 100 per cent wool, spun out of fine yarn to achieve that delicate, mesh-like effect. You can wear it on your head like the young lady in the picture, drape it over your shoulders, tie it, ascot-fashion, around your neck or (if you're young) splash it around your middle. There is a whole spectrum of colors to choose from. What more do you want for just about $2.

Heart-Warmer:

The little poncho (above, right) (so called after its Mexican prototype) is a heart-warmer (literally and figuratively). You're supposed to wear it as shown in the sketch, but there's no reason (that is, unless your hips and L-85 aren't in accord) why you couldn't wear it apronwise over an untrimmed wool dress. This comes in several colors, with contrasting borders. It's under $8.

Head-Warmer:

This triangular-shaped, all-wool head shawl can be very fetching on a young miss. No need to worry about this being whipped off in a gale, either. It fastens fore and aft. Pick your most becoming color—scarlet, kelly green, ice blue, brown or black—and thumb your nose at winter. About $4.

Queen Anne's Lace:

That's what the beautiful square shawl (above, left) looks like. It's ligh as air and as delicately woven as a spider web. It's formal enough to wear with an evening gown, headwise or shoulderwise. Or wear it as a costume piece with a plain dress. It's one of those exquisite shawls that you'll cherish (just like grandmother did). It's under $11 and is available in white, black and pastel shades.

Looks like the winter offensive is already under way (where's that Indian summer?). It's your move.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Those of us whose children have had to wear glasses understand perfectly how our attitudes toward these "blinders" can magnify or minimize the child's own emotions. Mrs. D. V. G. considers, and rightly, that parents are too little aware of this fact.

"We read articles every day having to do with the various types or forms of glasses available, those which will not detract from the wearer's appearance. This information is no doubt of interest to adults but it is of little comfort to the youngster of 5 to 7 who has to wear glasses for the first time.

"My mother had to buy glasses for me when I was 6 years old. No mention was made of my appearance. No word of regret was uttered in my presence. Instead, my mother talked to me in the following manner. 'How fortunate you are to be living in times like these when doctors are clever enough to make glasses for your eyes. Now you can see better. Now you won't have headaches any more. Each day you will appreciate them when you realize how much they help you. Take care of them, for they are your best friends. Without them you are lost. With them you are as happy and comfortable as any other child.'

"How many times I have sickened on hearing a thoughtless parent bemoaning the tragedy of her darling who had to wear glasses! The child accepts this attitude and resents glasses instead of being eternally grateful for them."

The attitude of most parents is natural, we have to admit. But it is true that if they can mask their own emotions of regret that the child should be compelled to wear glasses, it might prevent the child from developing that old demon hump of inferiority.

All children, whether or not they wear glasses, would profit by being told the self-same thing.

Our leaflet, "Handicaps of the School Child," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Margarine Again Meets Demands Of War Time

If ever there's been a food that deserves an award for patriotism its margarine. It was born out of wartime necessity, more than 70 years ago. Napoleon III offered a rich prize to the person who would invent a "palatable, appetizing, nutritious and economical" alternate for butter. The award went to Meze-Mouries, a French chemist, when he offered oleomargarine, a valuable and wholesome food.

Now in this great war, margarine is again making a contribution. Its social status has become secure. No longer are apologies offered when it is served.

Margarine not only has a nutritional record but a historical one too. It has been the subject of controversy in both Federal and State legislation. Because it is a wholesome and nutritious food made of either vegetable oils, animal fats, or a combination of the two, and pasteurized skimmed milk it is a contemporary of butter.

Margine fortified with vitamin A is included within the dietary pattern recommended by the committee on food and nutrition of the National Research Council and by the nutrition division of the Federal Security Agency of the United States Government.

For a better standard of health the United States Department of Agriculture recommends that each person consume about 36 pounds of table fats each year. Well, with the present supply of butter, everyone can't buy butter. But there are ardent supporters of both these valuable fats — margarine and butter. Some prefer butter for taste, others prefer margarine for thrift, and so it goes.

For those who do not entirely know about the food value of margarine it is well to learn about it. Today's vitaminized margarine is made from pure vegetable oils, churned for fine flavor in fresh pasteurized skim milk, and with at least 9000 USP units of vitamin A (the amount found in average butter), added to every pound. Vitaminized margarine, therefore, since it supplies the same amount of energy, pound for pound, as butter, and since it can now be obtained with the added vitamin A, is rated as a protective food.

One pound of beef liver requires just four brown points. Yet it will serve four persons when combined with meat, potatoes, onions and other ingredients. This is one of the most nutritious of the casserole family, and can be whisked from the oven to the table with very little ado.

Margarine has much to recommend it. It is nutritious. It is at most times available. It requires but 4 points per pound. It is offered at a reasonable price in this time of high prices. It has splendid keeping qualities. All of these points highly recommend this food now that we are trying to achieve good nutrition in spite of food shortages and high prices.

Let's plan a menu using dishes that can be made successfully with margarine.

Dinner Menu

Liver Lyonnaise
Corn Pudding Green Beans
Tossed Green Salad
Buttermilk Biscuits Jam
Old-Time Spice Cake Tea

LIVER LYONNAISE

Heat 4 tablespoons chopped salt pork in frying pan. Add 1 pound sliced beef liver which has been sprinkled with 2 tablespoons flour. Brown on both sides. Transfer liver to a shallow, greased baking dish. Cover with 2 cups sliced potatoes which have been blended with 3 tablespoons flour, ¼ cup thinly sliced onions, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper and ¼ teaspoon celery seed. Add 1 cup milk and 2 tablespoons melted margarine or butter. Cover and bake 1 hour in moderate oven. Uncover last 10 minutes to brown the top. Serves four.

BUTTERMILK BISCUITS

Mix and sift together 2 cups flour, ½ teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon baking powder. Work in 2 tablespoons margarine with a fork and add ¾ cup sour milk or buttermilk to make soft dough. Roll to ½ inch thick, cut, place on baking sheet; bake in moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.) until done and brown. Makes 16 biscuits.

CORN PUDDING

Grate 6 large ears of corn or snip top with a knife, and press out milk and pulp. Add 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 3 well-beaten eggs, 2 cups sweet milk, 2 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon pepper and 2 tablespoons melted margarine. Place in a 375° F. oven. When pudding begins to stiffen on sides, with a knife pull or fold it toward center and bake until pudding is firm and browned. Makes four to six servings.

OLD-TIME SPICE CAKE

Sift together three times: 3 cups sifted flour, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon mace, ½ teaspoon cloves, 1 teaspoon allspice and 1 teaspoon soda. Cream 1 cup margarine, add 2 cups sugar and beat until light. Beat in 4 well-beaten eggs. Add 1 cup strong coffee and flour mixture alternately, beating until smooth after each addition. Fold in 1 cup raisins. Turn into margarinized sheets pans in moderate over (350° F.) until center is firm to light touch (about 30 minutes). Turn out and cool. Spread with icing made by blending 1 tablespoon margarine with 1 pound confectioners' sugar and enough cream to give spreading consistency; flavor to suit taste. Cut cake in squares to serve. Makes 15 to 18 servings.

Crisp Doughnuts For Brisk Days

With Halloween approaching, this is a good time to brush up on your doughnut making. In the meantime, these tender morsels will tempt the family at breakfast while giving them a meal that will "stick to the ribs" right up to the lunch hour.

BUTTERMILK DOUGHNUTS

Combine 2½ tablespoons butter or margarine with 1½ cups sugar. Add 2 eggs and beat well. Mix 3 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon soda, ¾ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon ginger and ½ teaspoon nutmeg and sift together three times. Add alternately with 1 cup buttermilk, mixing together. Slowly add 1 cup flour until dough is of right consistency for rolling. Roll, cut, fry in deep fat (365 degrees F.).

Mary Barber Vice Chairman in Charge Of Nutrition for Civilian War Services

Washington homemakers may breathe a sigh of relief, for help in their multifold food problems is now in sight. Miss Mary I. Barber, Food Consultant for the Secretary of War, assigned to the Office of Quartermaster General, has just been appointed vice chairman in charge of nutrition, Civilian War Services Division of the District of Columbia.

Loaned to the Government by the Kellogg Co. more than two years ago, Miss Barber has planned adequate rations for our fighting men. She's constantly on the jump to keep ahead of Army planning, and has a fund of experience gained in the World War I to draw from. At that time she was on the staff of New York State's Bureau of Conservation.

In assuming the vice chairmanship, Miss Barber's activities will be greatly increased, for she's to act as an adviser on nutritional problems to the District's Civilian War Services Division. This home economist is always ready to take on new duties in her field. Perhaps that enormous amount of energy comes from those breakfasts she advocates.

With the establishment of the new division, one of Miss Barber's fondest dreams will begin to come true—making a wartime public more conscious of good nutrition. One of her pet peeves has always been the "gulp and run" breakfast, and she's convinced that raising the eating standards would cut down "absenteeism." Since workers are keyed to the high pitch of war production, she feels that they must now be extra careful to have a balanced diet.

The division will give direct help to the consumer in combating dietary lacks which might result from poor meal-planning during rationing.

Before coming to Washington Miss Barber was president of the American Dietetic Association. She received her B.S. degree from Teachers' College, Columbia University, and last year was awarded an honorary science degree from Drexel Institute of Technology in Philadelphia.

MISS BARBER

Government Office Launches Production Drive; Stenographers Must Get Out 20 Letters Daily; Girl Is Paralyzed; She Can't Do More Than 13

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In the Government office where I work as a stenographer, a drive was launched recently to step up production. They held a big meeting, set certain quotas, etc. I have worked there several years,—since before the war. I am aware that I only do about half as much,—in actual work turned out,—as the other girls. But I do not waste time, talking or fiddling. I just keep plodding along. Most of the letters are long; and my supervisor is puzzled that I do so few, in comparison to the other girls, although I work steadily all day long.

I am geared slow. When I try to rush, I only get excited and muff things. By keeping a steady pace, I can do a good job. For instance, when the traffic light is red and I think there is not enough time to cross the street at a leisurely pace, I wait for the light to change again, rather than take a chance on having to run. When I have to run to "make the light," I get scared and excited. If I get caught in the middle of the street, with the light turning green and see automobiles starting toward me, I don't know myself what I am likely to do . . . Rather than fight the pushing crowds in trolleys, I wait until a car comes along that has seating space . . . I get up early in the morning, so as not have to rush, getting dressed; or else I am a wreck for work.

Says She's Geared Slow; Should She Change Jobs?

At work, on good days, my production goes up to medium. On bad days, I go back to slow. After the meeting mentioned above, I was so concerned that I just went to pieces. Day after day, my work was no good. It was the longest fit of depression I ever had. Finally, my husband hauled me out of it. He told me my quota, for a while,—until I got back on my feet,—was how many letters I could do. I started reading my notes before transcribing them, and typing away at an easy pace, with every effort concentrated on accuracy. It is working. I am turning out from 6 to 12 or 13 correct letters a day, depending upon whether it is a good or bad day; whether I am tired or nervous, etc. However, the daily quota is set at 20. I have never done that many letters in a day; and I have been doing stenography for 10 years. Accuracy has been my chief merit; not speed. Believe me, I have tried all the tricks to gain speed; but have failed, and only wore myself out and broke my heart trying. I should have been born into a more leisurely age than this mad modern world.

Several times, I have sought to get into clerical work in our organization, which would be less of a strain. But each time I had all doors closed to me; and back to stenography I go, willy-nilly. In your opinion, should I seek other employment more suited to my temperament? Or go on plodding steadily away, getting out my fewer-letters-a-day in stenography? I am a capable stenographer; it is just that I am not fast; never have been; probably never will be. I should like a long-range-vision answer. R. C. W.

DEAR R. C. W.: It seems to me that sound vocational guidance for you must be based on the findings of an "aptitude test,"—which would help to determine whether your "trouble" calls for a change of occupation; or whether it rather signifies neurotic distress that is seriously hampering your powers of coordination in every situation that requires organized instantaneous response of mind and body. It may be, of course, that you are (as you say) "just geared slow." A goodly percentage of our ablest citizens, in all walks of life, belong in the healthily phlegmatic category of temperament; and when wisely permitted to work at their natural slow pace, turn out production that for quality and quantity compares favorably (in ratio to their numbers) with the achievement-showing of the quicker-thinking, faster-moving breed of humans.

Take Aptitude Test To Get Your Bearings

However, there is some question in my mind as to whether you really fit in that category. It has been my observation that the dyed-in-the-wool, genuinely slow-paced individual is vested with a stolidly imperturbable temperament. He doesn't tend to "get rattled" or "all worked up" under the pressure of events such as you describe,—whether in the office with a "production-drive" on, or in the streets with traffic bearing down, or aboard the trolley, where it's every man for himself. And the fact that you DO tend to "go all to pieces" in such circumstances, suggests that in essence you are more-than-ordinarily jittery, rather than the reverse. In other words, it remains to be proved whether you are the placid-plodder type you think you are. Or whether your preference for the slow-moving tempo doesn't reflect a deeply frightened reaction to life in general; a kind of "Go slow now and don't lose your bearings" philosophy, which gives way to pure panic when you find yourself pushed out of the planned rut, or challenged to make an impromptu adaptation to unexpected developments.

Is Neurotic Distress At Root of the Problem?

So, rather than try, at this distance from your difficulty, to chart a "long-range" program for you, I suggest you apply to Dr. Thelma Hunt, head of the psychology department of George Washington University, for an aptitude test. The telephone number is NAtional 5200. And the psychology department,—although by no means "in the market" to render this kind of service to the public,—does occasionally lend a helping hand to a maladjusted worker in vocational distress. The aptitude test will show whether you might do better work in a different job; and should also shed light on the question of whether you might be even more substantially benefited by psychological re-education for living. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

"Any woman who will tell her age will tell anything," a woman announced to me the other day. Naturally, I couldn't resist putting her to the test, but she wouldn't tell me.

You probably don't feel that strongly on the age question, but a good many women do. Personally, I think it is beside the point to be shy about telling your age—say, five years shy—when there are so many dead giveaways.

The way you walk may be a tattle tale. Toeing out shows you learned to walk in the "elegant" age. It was one of the finishing school touches about 1900. (Of course, that was before my time—just before!). Walking with stiff knees and short jerky steps practically puts you in the old lady class. To walk young, swing your legs from the hips, forget about your knees, point your toes straight ahead, and keep your head up but your shoulders relaxed.

Another conspicuous sign of age is that pin-cushion of fat on the back of the neck. It is called a "dowager's hump" and it marks you as 41 plus.

The back of your upper arms is a spot you are inclined to overlook. Any time after 35 is a dangerous age for those triceps muscles that are supposed to keep your arms round and young. The activity these muscles haven't been getting for about 10 years begins to show up then.

But the bulk of the evidence against your youth may be the midsection. When extra padding settles down around the middle it adds YEARS.

We all have to grow old. There's nothing against that. But why not stay young-looking as long as we can? That takes keeping in condition. Here are exercises that will do away with those telltale signs and make you feel fit.

Lie face downward on floor, legs straight down, hands clasped back of neck. Keep your feet on the floor and raise your head and trunk slowly back and up, hold it, and try to force the elbows still higher. Relax and repeat, not more than three times. That gets at the back of the neck and the back of the arms and straightens the shoulders.

Now, find a door-frame in your house that juts out. Get down on on your knees in the doorway with your back against the door-frame, legs back at either side of the wall. First, pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles and try to flatten the small of your back against the door-frame. Stretch arms straight out at sides, shoulder level, and slowly bend sideward to touch fingers to floor without lowering arms from shoulder line. Come back to starting position, relax, and repeat the whole thing, bending to other side. Keep on for 10 counts. That's a humdinger for the stomach and waistline.

Secretary's Secretary Ends 25 Years' Service

Mrs. Martha McPherson, Who Served Eight Secretaries of War, Tells Success Story

"It is an achievement to serve one Cabinet member successfully. To serve eight is almost a miracle."

So said a news writer of Mrs. Martha E. McPherson, who recently retired from the War Department after a quarter-century of service. Mrs. McPherson, a motherly, sweet-faced woman, has had the unique experience of retaining her post of confidential secretary to the Secretary of War through five administrations. During this time she has had the confidences of eight famous men—Newton D. Baker, John W. Weeks, Dwight F. Davis, James W. Good, Patrick J. Hurley, George H. Dern, Harry H. Woodring and Henry L. Stimson.

Harris & Ewing
MRS. McPHERSON

A warm personality, Mrs. McPherson's official friendships have become personal ones and her collection of autographed photographs of the great is her pride and joy. During the last few months this right-hand woman to eight Cabinet members has not been well and she is now visiting her sister in St. Paul, Minn. After 25 years Mrs. McPherson deserves a rest.

No one is better fitted than Mrs. McPherson to expound on how to win jobs and influence Cabinet members. Washington secretaries, take heed. This is Mrs. McPherson's story in her own words:

"It was my skill as a stenographer that gave me the opportunity to use other talents. Had it not been for that skill, I certainly should not have had such a fascinating occupational experience. I really learned shorthand so well that I have always said if I died and were resurrected, I could still write it. I not only learned, but taught it while still in my teens.

Stenography Gave Her First Start

"Later I married and devoted many years to homemaking and raising my two sons," she continues. "When the World War broke into my peaceful existence, I had my shorthand 'ready for action.' Everywhere in New York I saw appeals to stenographers, and because I was feeling very patriotic I took the civil service examination and was appointed almost immediately to the Army Inspector of Ordnance.

"Very soon, however," Mrs. McPherson went on, "I returned to Washington and was employed in the Inspection Division of the War Department. One day I was asked to be assistant to the head of the Shell Loading and Assembling Branch, an important position which I gladly accepted. When the armistice was signed, there was no more loading and assembling of shells and our branch was dissolved. Then I answered a call from the Third Assistant Secretary of War for an expert stenographer, the regular one being ill with the flu. From that position I went to the office of Secretary of War Baker, where I remained until the end of his administration, and I have been doing my bit with the Secretaries of War ever since."

A tall, slender woman, Mrs. McPherson's quiet dignity is as impressive as her graciousness and tact. She is hesitant about expressing her opinion on qualities essential to a secretary's success, because, as she expresses it, "I'm not sure I know."

Born in England Attended School Here

Mrs. McPherson was born in Rotherham, England, a town made famous by Sir Walter Scott in "Ivanhoe." Coming to this country when she was 2 years old, she later attended Virginia Seminary and then, at the suggestion of a college professor, she entered the Spencerian Business College in Washington, where she stayed on to teach two years after graduation.

Her chief interest outside of her work has been her family. "I think it was the World War that gave me the courage to go back into the business world," she explains. "And I am glad, indeed, that I did."

Gift Sword Is Friendly Arab Gesture

By Martha Rhyne

The Government of the United States has a new sword—the gift of His Majesty ibn-Saud, King of Saudi Arabia. And it has diplomatically sparkled and glittered its way into the hearts of all who have seen it at the exhibition of the President's mementos at National Archives.

Surely no brighter symbol of Saudi Arabia could have been sent. The blade of the sword is very old Damascus steel, first made in Syria before the Christian era, characterized by a peculiar watered or streaked appearance. The gift, brought to the Chief Executive by the King's sons, Amir Faisal and Amir Khalid, recent visitors of state here, is one of a variety so keen of cutting edge that it will sever iron or the most delicate fabric floating in the air.

Scabbard Is of Gold and Leather

The jeweled gold scabbard with midsection of rare leather and the emblazoned hilt were designed and made especially for President Roosevelt, who received the gift on behalf of the Nation. The case, itself a gem of craftsmanship, is made of handsome blue velvet mounted with silver and arrived in Washington with the Arabian mission. It was presented to President Roosevelt at a state dinner by the berobed princes who fascinated official Washington last weekend.

Displayed with the sword are numerous other gifts, including a tiara of semiprecious jewels and two wide gold bracelets, gifts to Mrs. Roosevelt from the Sultan of Morocco, brought from Casablanca by the President. The Sultan presented the President with a gold-sheathed yataghan, rhythmic name for a short saber, with fat bone handle.

Princes to Visit Southwest Area

The Saudi Arabian princes are now in New York and will leave that city tomorrow for a tour of the Southwest. They will pay visits to Albuquerque and Gallup, N. Mex.; Fort Wingate, the Petrified Forest, the Grand Canyon, points in Arizona, the oilfields of California, Los Angeles, and San Francisco. They are due back at The Homestead on October 23, from where they will leave for England a few days later.

Farewell Party Honors Britisher

Col. A. E. N. Walter, British Royal Engineers, was the guest of honor at a farewell 8 o'clock cocktail party given yesterday at the Mayflower.

Hosts at the stag affair were members of the Transportation Branch of the British Army Staff, for which Colonel Walter has been Deputy Director since coming to Washington in January, 1942. He has also held the post of Director of Supplies of the British Supply Mission.

Colonel Walter, who will receive the rank of Brigadier shortly is being transferred from Washington to a new post.

Army to Take Mrs. Fremont's Newport Villa

Seaview Terrace, Mrs. John C. Fremont's villa at Newport, R. I., will be taken over by the Army soon, according to an announcement from Newport attorneys yesterday.

The house will be remembered by Washington's "cave-dwelers" as the Edson Bradley House, which stood at Dupont Circle and 19th st. and was moved, brick by brick, to Newport by the late Mr. and Mrs. Bradley, parents of Mrs. Fremont. The mansion boasted its own private chapel and theater.

Last year the City of Newport took over Seaview Terrace for nonpayment of taxes. The stables and gardener's cottage were sold at auction, but the house, too large for modern-day living, failed to get a bidder.

Mrs. Fremont, before her marriage last year, was Mrs. Herbert Shipman, widow of the Rev. Dr. Shipman, Suffragan Bishof of the Episcopal Diocese of New York. Captain Fremont, USN, is the son of Mrs. John C. Fremont of Washington and the late Admiral Fremont. His sisters are Miss Jessie Fremont and Mrs. Henry Hull, wife of the actor who brought fame to the role of Jeter Lester in "Tobacco Road."

About Washington . . .

THERE HAS BEEN wide speculation around Washington as to whether Mrs. William Averell Harriman would accompany her husband, the newly appointed Ambassador to the Soviet, to his new post. Last wife to go with a United States envoy to the Russian capital was Mrs. Laurence Steinhardt, who improved her time there by learning the language and becoming acquainted with Russians in every walk of life.

Mrs. Harriman

Mrs. William Standley, who had been at her husband's side on numerous tours of naval duty, stayed in her California home when the admiral took off to Moscow. Only the war, she said, could have prevented her going with him.

The war, or rather her own jammed schedule of war work, will also keep Mrs. Harriman at home—at least, for the time being. "Matter of fact, I'm not sure I would want to go to Russia in wartime; and besides, I'm too busy here," she said in New York the other day.

Another reason Mrs. Harriman hesitates to leave America at this time is that she dislikes getting so far away from her 17-year-old daughter, Nancy, who is a senior at Foxcroft; her 18-year-old son, Harry Payne Whitney now serving with the Seabees and sometimes gets home on leave; and her several other children. She has been the foster-mother of Eddy Duchin's child ever since the death of his wife, and she also has in charge a number of English children.

Added to those responsibilities are her duties as full-time treasurer of the Ship's Service Committee, a job that takes up endless daytime hours and many of her evenings. And she is an active member of the sponsoring committee for the loan exhibition of Vincent Van Gogh's paintings and letters which recently opened at the Wildenstein Galleries to raise funds for American and Dutch war relief.

When Averell Harriman went to London to assume duties as our Ambassador there, his attractive wife did not go with him. "The war and duties here again," she said. At that time she was busy turning over her 150-room mansion at Arden, N. Y., to the Navy as a convalescent home. About that time she also closed her art gallery on East Fifty-seventh st., New York.

Serving as Ambassador Harriman's hostess in London was Kathleen Harriman, his daughter by his first wife, who will go with him to Moscow.

THEY'RE THE FRESHEST eggs we can get . . . but Republicans won't buy 'em," said a salesman at a midtown market yesterday. He was pointing toward a crate marked "Fresh Eggs, Headwaters Farm."

Secretary Ickes

As everybody knows, or should, Headwaters Farm is the home of Interior Secretary Harold Ickes, and a produce-filled truck rolls Washington-ward from that place daily.

"The minute some of our customers find out our eggs come from Ickes, they won't have 'em," the salesman went on. "You wouldn't think political prejudices could go that far . . . but they do. I can't remember when a Republican has bought an Ickes egg."

Every member of the Oklahoma congressional delegation who hasn't already seen the musical "Oklahoma" in New York will be on hand for a performance when that hit show comes to Washington week after next. They will, that is, IF they can get seats. From what I can gather, however, those who haven't already made reservations are going to have a tough time; for this Nation's Capital is going theater-conscious as it never has before, and top-ring officialdom has signed up by the dozens, not only for the first Theater Guild-American Theater Society play of the year, but also the other five.

Former Representative and Mrs. Joseph Casey are among the very few Capitalites who saw the first performance of "Oklahoma" many months ago in Boston. It was then called "Away We Go," and Mrs. Casey predicted that unless a lot of changes were made, the show would be a failure. They were, and it turned out to be the hit of the year.

STORIES ABOUT those fabulous Arabian princes . . . and the land from which they came to visit Washington . . . are still making the Capital rounds. Most entertaining one I've heard lately has to do with the wives of the Saudi Arabian King Abdul Aziz Ibn Saud, and I believe it is authentic. Anyway, it came from a Washingtonian who visited the desert kingdom not long ago, and learned a lot about marital customs there. As he put it, "Nobody knows—or at least I don't—how many wives the King has had . . . but it's a matter of record that his thirty-first son was born only a couple of months ago.

"The best thing that can happen to a woman in Saudi Arabia is to be recognized as the wife of the King. From then on, her social position is assured, and when the King takes other wives—he generally has three or four at a time—each former wife can have her choice of husbands."

From that same informant I found out that the Washington visit of the Saudi Arabian princes was arranged some time ago when Brig. Gen. Patrick Hurley was on his roving mission to the Middle East . . . and that the ton of luggage accompanying Their Royal Highnesses included just as many gifts for President Roosevelt as for King George of England. "And one other thing," added my informant, the word 'sheik' never seems to be pronounced correctly in Washington. It's not 'sheek,' it's 'shake,' " he added. Great shakes, I'd say.

VERY MUCH MISSED in Washington is the lovedy and lively Senora Patria Mencia de Krizman, former Cuban attache here, who went to California some time ago to take over duties as Cuban vice consul at Los Angeles. A note from pretty Patria runs as follows:

Senora De Krizman

"When I left Washington two months ago, little did I know that it would be for a long absence. I miss Washington tremendously. This is a lovely place but quite different in more ways than one, and I still prefer the East."

Senora Mencia de Krizman was one of the first Cuban women to be admitted to the Diplomatic Corps, and for some time was one of the two employed at the Embassy here. Her husband, Serge Krizman, who was formerly connected with the Yugoslav Embassy is also on diplomatic duty in California.

This is his second tour of duty in California. He was out there last year to serve as technical adviser and consultant when the film, "The Chetniks" was being made.

Lady Dill Entertains at Tea For Group of West Indies ATS

Newcomers Here From Caribbean Area Feel They Have Caught Up With War

By Peggy Preston

"We feel we have finally caught up with the war."

Trim and neat in her new uniform of the British Women's Auxiliary Territorial Services, Pvt. Pauline Cotterell smiled this opinion over a teacup yesterday afternoon at the party given by Lady Dill welcoming the contingent of ATS who are here from the south Caribbean area.

Private Cotterell is one of 45 young women who shared honors at yesterday's 5 to 7 tea held in the spacious Q st. home of the British Field Marshal Sir John Dill, and Lady Dill. The occasion marked the official welcome to Washington of these latest recruits to the ATS, all of whom hail from the sun-drenched islands of Trinidad and Barbados.

The late afternoon sun of Indian summer flooded the small garden at the rear of the house and warmed the drawing room where Lady Dill greeted her guests. Receiving with her was Mrs. George N. Macready, wife of the Commander of the British Army Staff in Washington under whose command the newcomers are serving.

Present also were wives of officers serving here with the British Army Staff, as well as ranking officers of the ATS. An early arrival was tall, blond Senior Comdr. Pamela Hammick, head of the U. S. Branch of the ATS, who has been at her post here since last spring.

"We are especially pleased with these recruits," Commander Hammick explained, "because they are the first to join the ranks from the Caribbean area. Their presence in the ATS makes it an organization representative of the entire British Empire."

The 45 young women in khaki who were being honored yesterday arrived in Washington about six weeks ago and are already engaged in work for the British Army Staff. According to their chief, Commander Hammick, the recruitment of girls from the Caribbean islands was decided upon last spring when it became evident that more women were needed for staff work here. A recruiting officer sent to the British West Indies encountered such enthusiasm that the quota was filled in a few weeks. The volunteers were then sent to Canada for training, given uniforms and assigned to headquarters here.

All of the girls are in their 20's. The daughters of British government officials in the West Indies, they are almost all devotees of swimming and sailing and are pondering the unpleasantness of a northern winter.

Commander Hammick volunteered the information that romance is setting heavy hands on her new recruits. "We have several marriages coming up," she revealed, "to American boys they met in the West Indies and have remet since coming here."

Xmas Toys Are Going to Britain

A deadline has been met and hundreds of British children will have toys from America on Christmas morning.

Everyone who had anything to do with the "Toy Tea" given recently at the British War Relief Shop is very happy about the 820 toys brought in the day of the tea. These tea gifts brought the grand total to 1585 toys that met the mail deadline to England.

Among the toys brought in that day were two slim stuffed dolls, exquisitely dressed, one in ballet costume complete to the shoes. Mrs. B. T. Hoal, who was general chairman for the event, would love to know, and thank, whoever did such beautiful work. The maker put the dolls down very quietly and went away.

Huber of Chevy Chase, Md., formerly of El Salvador, will return tomorrow to the University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill., where she will resume her studies in the School of Journalism. An advertising major, she holds a junior editorship on the Daily Illini, the university's publication, and is an officer of the Woman's Cosmopolitan Club. During the summer she was employed at the Office of Economic Warfare and was active with the Anti-Aircraft Volunteers.

TRY the Bread that's TENDER Fresh and please your whole family!

Housewives know there's nothing quite like the delicious taste of really fresh bread. That's why so many choose Rice's Bread. It makes sandwiches more tempting—because each slice is so fluffy-light, so tender, so fragrantly fresh! And it makes tasty, fresh-flavored toast. So ask for Rice's Tender-Fresh Bread at your grocer's today.

RICE'S Bread is Tender-Fresh because it's made that way!

1 That tender-freshness is the result of timed-to-the-minute cooling. The golden loaves are rushed from their hot ovens to—

2 scientifically-cooled rooms. Here Rice's Bread is cooled by washed, purified air. This plus controlled-timing actually locks the freshness in.

3 Rice's Bread is then whisked from the cooling room and securely wrapped for lasting freshness. A few more minutes—and it's on the way to your grocer's.

Henie Still Top Skater In 'Wintertime', Capitol

"WINTERTIME," the new Twentieth Century-Fox reminder of Sonja Henie's perpetual preeminence in the frozen field of her Olympic triumphs, current on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, in all other respects is a pretty fatuous fable.

Cast in the familiar mold of all Henie pictures, the present exhibit employs its "plot" merely as a shoddy subterfuge through which transparent excuses for the introduction of its star's incomparable skating sequences may be discovered. It concerns the rehabilitation of a run-down inn—attempting the considerable job of competing with the Chateau Frontenac—through the exasperation of a wealthy Norwegian, whose niece is the queen of all her gender who aspire to renown in the rinks. Hjalmar Ostgaard, it seems, is in the habit of buying any establishment that displeases him, for the sheer satisfaction of firing the hired help.

Punctuating this major thesis are a cluster of cluttered romances that unfurl a succession of mildly acid rivalries that result in all manner of unfunny things. Foremost among them is the apparent conviction on the part of Author Arthur Kober—who should have known better—and Scenarists E. Edwin Morand, Jack Jevne and Lynn Starling that it would be utterly hilarious to have Cesar Romero "climax" the comedy by dashing about a hotel lounge and diving into snowdrifts in that epitome of comic conceits, the long-sleeved and long-legged unionsuit!

It is a fair guess, nevertheless, that "Wintertime" will meet with the enthusiastic endorsement of a large segment of the picture-going populace and for conspicuously obvious reasons.

Sonja Henie has never pretended to be any great shakes as an actress or comedienne. So long as she is afforded adequate opportunity to execute her amazingly graceful feats on the sharp and shiny blades against a background of spectacular splendor, that is enough in the eyes of her admirers. She has a threefold opportunity for that here. Over and above this, Miss Henie teams with Cesar Romero in a brief, but better-than-usual, exposition of the intricacies of the ballroom dance; several catchy songs are sprinkled through the proceedings and Woody Herman and His Orchestra are present throughout to camouflage the more dormant periods of the action with syncopated sound. In the face of all this, that "plot," to many, will not matter.

Cast as Good as Script Permits

The cast is of a caliber that deserves something a little fruitier than the authorial typewriters have provided.

Miss Henie, of course, is already accounted for. Jack Oakie, as the beleaguered boniface, willing to take the outside chance, battles bravely to make his role seem more amusing than it is, and Cesar Romero, always under the handicap of the scripters lack of resourcefulness, does likewise as the opportunist, Brad Bradford. And so does S. Z. Sakall, one of the finest of the character comedians, in the hapless character of Ostgaard. Cornel Wilde seems to have been chosen as the "romantic" lead so that the star's talents as an actress might not be overshadowed.

Carole Landis is in there pitching perturbation at every turn, helping out with the songs and otherwise giving a zestful performance, and the Herman Orchestra is a great help to "Wintertime," "Later Tonight," "Dancing in the Dawn", "I Like It Here" and the film's other musical interruptions.

For the stage at the Capitol this week, Manager Gene Ford has whipped up a nice diversity of entertainment. Headlined by Dick Buckley, a British comedian of original method, who has no end of fun—the audience, too—with the vari-voiced antics he seems to impart to four recruits from the front of the house, the bill is opened by the Jim Wong Troupe, Celestial gymnasts of the first order. The three Hylton Sisters score decisively, as they always do, in a group of clever vocal arrangements, and Jr. Buckwalter and His Marimba Queens close the agreeably diverting interlude with a period of subdued and richly harmonious melody. Five talented girls—one slapping a bass viol—and a boy they are.

The excellence of the living portion of the program carries over in front of the footlights. Sam Jack Kaufman offers a rousing overture, featuring Lynn Allison's fine soprano and the lusty harmonizing of the Capitolians, and Art Brown puts over his organized community sing with characteristic eclat, elan and enthusiasm.

Those Two Ace Slapstickers 'Hit the Ice,' at RKO-Keith's

By Marjorie Kelly

The best slapstick pair in the business are at it again on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater in "Hit the Ice," the last film Abbott and Costello made before the latter's illness. Judging by the response at yesterday morning's first showing, the fans found it good Abbott and Costello.

In this one, the boys to whom everything happens, get mixed up in a bank robbery. They accomplish this by blundering into a hospital room looking for a doctor. The room happens to be the hideout of a gangster who is preparing a perfect alibi for a holdup he is planning by taking tablets which give him fever. When the holdup comes off, he is going to be in his hospital room with a high temperature and a "Sleeping—Do Not Disturb" sign on his door.

All proceeds according to plan, except that instead of the thugs from Chicago, whom he is expecting to assist him, Abbott and Costello, sidewalk photographers, wander in and innocently give the password, "Where's the doctor?"

The Old Play on Words

Ensues, while the gangsters and the comics are striving for a meeting of minds, one of the silliest series of puns on record. "Where you been?" demands the No. 1 gangster. "Working," says Abbott tersely. "Doing what?" "Oh, we shot a few people," says Costello offhandedly.

It is not until the robbery is actually accomplished that the gangsters realize Abbott and Costello are not their awaited accomplices, and that Abbott and Costello realize the robbers are robbers.

The police get Abbott and Costello's descriptions, but not Abbott and Costello. The boys from there on are very busy getting away from the cops and following the criminals, in an effort to pin the crime on them and thus clear themselves. They follow them to Sun Valley, where most of the action implied by the title takes place.

Long on Music

The band in the film is Johnny Long's, and Ginny Simms is the singer. Songs include "I'm Like a Fish Out of Water," "Happiness Bound," "I'd Like to Set You to Music," and "Slap Polka," all sung against lavishly arranged backgrounds.

The pinch of romance tossed in for spice involves Costello, Ginny Simms and Johnny Long in a triangle. Costello, of course, emerges the loser. Long's appearances are sensibly confined to bandleading and posing with Miss Simms in his arms when the decision is announced. Patric Knowles comes in for a slight share of woo opposite Elyse Knox, a pretty blond youngster, who skates well and as an actress overshadows Miss Simms, who discharges her vocal duties capably, looks stunnnig in a series of ultra costumes.

Joseph Sawyer, Marc Lawrence and Sheldon Leonard are the tough guys.

The short subjects are more than usually interesting. "Broadway Dimout" is a "This Is America" subject.

"Day of Battle" is in sober contrast to the other auxiliary. It tells the story of a ship, from the materials which went into its construction to its last day afloat.

Anticipate Season in Frosty Film!

SONJA HENIE, JACK OAKIE, CORNEL WILDE, star and two of the principals in the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "Wintertime," latest medium for the display of Miss Henie's skill as skater, skiier and dancer, now on view as chief screen feature for the week at Loew's Capitol Theater. Cesar Romero, Carole Landis and S. Z. Sakall are others of conspicuous importance in the cast.

Cocks an Eager Ear!

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 7.—Understand Lieut. Rudy Vallee has been put on the carpet in Washington for the way he blistered the Ohio war bond committee for not utilizing the talents of his Coast Guard band to the best advantage in the Cleveland bond drive . . . An amusing yarn about Rudy's girl friend is that she carries different colored wigs with her, and when Rudy's mood changes, she changes the color of her hair to suit him . . . When Walter Slezak's fiancee got a look at his curly head the other day, she was all for calling off the wedding, until she was told that he'd have his curls shaved off before the marriage and wear a wig for the rest of his role in "Life Boat."

RUDY VALLEE

Got What He Wanted

Senator A. B. "Happy" Chandler of Kentucky is a guy who never says die. His short snorter bills practically encircle the globe. On this recent trip to England, he wanted King George's signature. He was told the king's equerry would have to take the matter up, which looked pretty hopeless. But when he was presented to the king, he pulled out the short snorter and got the king's signature there and then. When it was handed to Winston Churchill, he said, "What Another of those damned things?" But Churchill signed nevertheless. . . . Bill Girard has left Metro to become associate producer with Bryan Foy at Twentieth. That reminds me that Darryl Zanuck started something when he'll take credit only for the pictures he personally produces, which this year will be "Woodrow Wilson," "One World" and "The Purple Heart." It would clarify things no end and save film if all top producers in town followed suit.

Not Good Enough

There's chit-chat about teaming Teresa Wright and Gregory Peck in a remake of "The Enchanted Cottage." That wouldn't add to Mr. Peck's career. Remakes are only good when you're firmly established; then they're not too hot . . . Mitch Leisen was having fun slipping ice down Joan Fontaine's back on "Frenchman's Creek," hoping to get a rise out of her. But she no longer bites.

Ray Enright is wielding the megaphone on Pat O'Brien's "Having a Wonderful Time" . . . Hazel Scott and Dwight Collins are expected to tie the knot any minute.

Times Square Tattle

New York, Oct. 7.

Professor Michoels, Russia's famed actor, yesterday told a group of American actors how Russia trains young actors—the preliminary schooling, and the drama institutes where they also are taught academic subjects. The graduates then are assigned to one of the 1200 theaters, by a central distribution committee. "An actor is the servant of the State," said Michoels, "and there is no dearth of jobs." . . . He reports that most actors here told him: "Look. I'm not a politician; I'm only an actor." To that, he replied: "The function of any artist is to draw people to a better movement. An actor influences audiences. And while he doesn't make a living out of politics, he's a politician in his interpretation of social conditions."

CHARLIE CHAPLIN

Michoels professed to see political significance even in "Oklahoma"—in which the hero sells a horse to raise money enough to bid for the heroine. "Does he duel with sabers, for her heart? No. With dollars," said Michoels. "That's not only serious, but bad politics" . . . When Charlie Chaplin told him: "I try to separate my art from my politics, but I get into trouble," the Russian replied: "When you show your little man always in danger, persecuted, trying to do good, and getting kicked around—is that political, or isn't it? An actor who says he's not political is wrong. He is political, but doesn't realize it, like Moliere's old man who for years didn't realize he was talking in prose."

Michoels then told of his production of "King Lear," which was rehearsed for 15 months. "When Tolstoi was 74, he wrote an article about King Lear, saying he had read it three times," Michoels said. "The first time was when he was young, then when he was mature and finally when he was over 70. Only after the third reading did Tolstoi dare to reveal his criticism—that the aged Lear, in giving away his kingdom, was an absurd and artificial character. Then, when he reached King Lear's age, Tolstoi did the very same thing—he left his home and family, and went out alone into the world . . ."

American labor will contribute more than $250,000 to the laborers of Italy, at an October 12 dinner at the Hotel Roosevelt. The speeches will be by William Green, Adolf A. Berle, jr., and Count Sforza . . . Sforza, incidentally, will join an Italian Cabinet with Badoglio, provided Badoglio isn't Premier . . . A group of well-known college professors and writers will testify at the Post Office hearings regarding the mail privileges of "Esquire" . . . In order that London should hear the World Series broadcasts from St. Louis, via the BBC, the London blackout will be postponed for 15 minutes during those nights.

Bill Tilden now is giving private tennis lessons in Hollywood and uses a new method. He insists that the California youngsters never learned how to walk properly because they always used cars. Tilden therefore starts his tennis instructions with lessons in how to walk properly . . . Leo Durocher will make New York his permanent home

Episcopal Code Is Debated in Divorce Issue

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Oct. 7.—The question of liberalizing the Protestant Episcopal Church canon governing remarriage of divorced persons developed today the first major controversy on the floor of the church's fifty-fourth triennial convention.

On one side was a group which would repeal the one present exception, which condones remarriage of innocent parties in divorce actions based on adultery.

This group would tighten the canons further by prohibiting marriages in the church unless both parties were baptized in the Episcopal faith.

On the other side was a group which would permit the remarriage of divorced persons at the decreation of the diocesan bishop, after conferences with a parish presbyter, an attorney and a psychiatrist. This group, supporting the report of the church's joint commission on matrimony, also would require only one party to a marriage to be baptized in the church.

Felt Mercy Was Lacking

The commission's proposal was presented by the Rev. A. B. Kinsolving, 2d of Pittsburgh, who told the House of Deputies that deletion of the exception for adultery "is a castigation of previous church legislation implying that adultery is the one unpardonable sin.

"But it is the feeling of the commission that it is not nearly so unpardonable as the sin of hypocrisy, which is the natural result of such an exception," he added.

"We have proposed this new canon because the commission felt the existing canon did not deal with the very difficult problems of holy matrimony facing the entire Christian world—particularly with regard to mercy and forgiveness.

"There have been discovered such circumstances as psychic impotence and other sex maladjustments, which are latent but not evident at the time of marriage, and which cannot be found until after the marriage."

Amendment Offered

An amendment offered by John C. Spaulding of Detroit sought to make "deterioration of character after marriage an equal grounds for remarriage in the church." Another by David E. Bronson of Minneapolis called for abstracting all cases of applicants for remarriage "as a clearing house of decisions to help in interpreting this canon."

The proposal which would prohibit remarriage of all divorced persons was written by the Rev. Donald H. Wattley of New Orleans, La., chairman of the majority group of the deputies' committee on canons. Mr. Wattley also proposed excommunication for one year of persons marrying outside the church, but this later was stricken from the report with his consent.

Spellman Praises Franco as Loyal To God and Spain

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Archbishop Francis J. Spellman today described Gen. Francisco Franco of Spain as a man loyal to his God and his country.

In a group of letters written to his father during his visit to Europe and the Middle East and published in the current Collier's weekly, the Archbishop said:

"Whatever criticism has been made of General Franco (and it has been considerable), I cannot doubt that he is a man loyal to his God, devoted to his country's welfare, and definitely willing to sacrifice himself in any capacity and to any extent for Spain."

Radio Bond Cavalcade Set For Tomorrow

Soliciting war bond orders by telephone, a three-hour Treasury Radio Bond Cavalcade will be held tomorrow at 1 p. m. in the National Press Club auditorium. Admission to the program, which will feature notables from radio, stage and the press, will be purchase of a war bond or a filled war stamp book.

The D. C. War Finance Committee is sponsoring the show, and telephoned bond orders will be taken by Station WWDC, which will broadcast the program.

Featured artists will be Dixie Rafter, Miss Washington; Jean Bartel, Miss America, who will arrive at Union Station from Los Angeles tomorrow at 11:30 a. m.; Raymond Clapper, war correspondent; Barnet Nover, Washington Post columnist; the cast of "The Army Play by Play"; Shannon Bolin and Lynn Allison, radio and stage singers; acts from the Earle and Capitol Theater stage shows; Durward Bowersox, violinist, and Evelyn Tyner, pianist.

Music will be furnished by the Army Air Forces Band and Denny Beckner's Fourteen Madcap Merrymakers. Mike Hunnicott of WWDC, will be master of ceremonies.

Among members of Congress scheduled to attend are Representative Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia; Senator Downey (Democrat) of California; Representative Luce (Republican) of Connecticut; Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York and Representative Sasscer (Democrat) of Maryland. Members of the women's service organizations have also been invited.

Meanwhile, additional bond sales in the third war loan drive were reported yesterday.

John Bowen, war bond chairman for People's Drug Store who will enter the Navy Monday, reported the drug store chain oversubscribed its goal 186 per cent for $1,577,350. District Fire Department employes, N. C. Robinson announced, bought $52,852 in bonds, while Robert J. Wilson announced that the Washington Restaurant Association's "bonds for bombers" drive netted more than $700,000.

Nationally the loan passed the 18-million-dollar mark last night, with more than a week remaining for late reports of individual sales. Secretary Morgenthau expressed confidence that the five-billion-dollar goal for individual bond purchases is "in the bag—and more."

Rose Radley, Printer for 48 Years, to Quit

After 48 years in the printing business, Rose Burr Radley, who spent more than 20 of those years as a linotypist with The Post, is going to retire.

Seventy-seven-year-old Mrs. Radley decided to become a printer when assigned to write a report on printing while attending high school in Trinidad, Colo. Questioning a young woman compositor, who was setting type by hand in a print shop, she learned that to join the profession one signed up with the Typographical Union and that a union membership card was as good for traveling as a passport. After graduating, she taught school for three years and then began her apprenticeship.

Starting in Albuquerque, N. Mex., in 1895, and using her "passport," she recalls that she "hit" every State in the Union but three, bicycling from job to job.

When linotypes came into vogue in 1897, Mrs. Radley learned to operate one in San Francisco. "I wasn't swift enough right off and was fired a couple of times" is the way she describes the early years. But she picked up enough speed to procure jobs in every big city on the West Coast from Vancouver, British Columbia, to San Diego. Moving to Galveston, Tex., she remained there for 20 years before coming to Washington.

In her spare time she has studied languages and journalism at George Washington University, 'cello at the Washington College of Music, and drawing and painting at the Corcoran Art Gallery. A three-month vacation was spent painting in the Grand Canyon in Colorado, and her paintings have been shown in Washington. Now working at The Post for only two days a week, she soon will retire and "do the things I want to do."

'Robin Hood' Pleases Audience

D. C. Recreation Department presents the Columbia Light Opera Company in DeKoven's "Robin Hood" on Thursday night in Roosevelt High School Auditorium. Director: Ethyl Manning. The cast:

Robin Hood.....Paul Schwartz
Maid Marian.....Margaret Sheridan
Sheriff of Nottingham.....Florenz Hinz
Sir Guy of Gisborne.....Kerper Propert
Little John.....Paul Lein
Will Scarlet.....Elwood Thompson
Friar Tuck.....Robert Bloch
Allan a Dale.....Connie Krueger
Dame Durden.....Hazel Karris
Annabel.....Amelia Shorday

By Ray C. B. Brown

Merrily starting its eighth season with one of the most popular American operettas ever written, the Columbia Light Opera Company staged DeKoven's "Robin Hood" last evening in Roosevelt High School auditorium before a well-pleased audience whose size was a good omen for the performances to be given tonight and Saturday evening. By its consistent policy of "no stars" and its admirable cooperative spirit, by its uniformly good choral work and its choice of meritorious scores, the organization has won the favor of Washingtonians and bids fair to hold it.

BROWN

The present production testifies to the good will of the members and the courage of Ethyl Manning, whose directorship has its difficulties in time of war. Forty-seven former members, including three women, are now serving in the armed forces, and this was a severe depletion. New singers have replaced some of the absent ones, and the only noticeable difference last evening was the predominantly feminine character of the chorus.

Principal roles were competently taken by Paul Schwartz as Robert, Earl of Huntington, alias Robin Hood; Margaret Sheridan as Lady Marian Fitzwalter, romantically Maid Marian; Florenz Hinz as the crafty Sheriff of Nottingham, Paul Lein as Little John, Elwood Thompson as Will Scarlet, Robert Bloch as Friar Tuck, Connie Krueger as Allan a Dale, Kerper Propert as Sir Guy of Gisborne, Hazel Karris as Dame Durden and Amelia Shorday as Annabel. The talent of Florenz Hinz for drollery and comedic impersonation had its wonted way with the auditors. With no intent to disparage the others, it must be reported that the best singing was done by Miss Sheridan and Messrs. Lein and Thompson.

Plea to Quash Curley Fraud Charges Made

District Court was asked yesterday to quash the indictment of Representative Curley (Democrat) of Massachusetts and five others on charges of conspiracy and mail fraud in a war contract scheme.

A plea in abatement was filed by James B. Underwood, a defendant. It claims that Justice James W. Morris, who convened the grand jury which returned the indictment, was without power to do so, since he was not chief justice of the court nor a senior associate justice.

Others indicted are: Donald Wakefield Smith, former National Labor Relations Board member; Marshall J. Fitzgerald, a lobbyist; Bertram Hall of Dallas, Tex., and James G. Fuller, now in prison on a conviction of sending fraudulent securities through the mails. All except Fuller, who has yet to be arraigned, have pleaded innocent.

Davis Criticizes Withholding Of War News

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 7.—Elmer Davis said today there was some justification for criticism in the United States over the withholding of war news which Prime Minister Churchill subsequently disclosed in a speech to the British Parliament September 21.

Davis, director of the Office of War Information, told members of the New York Rotary Club he referred specifically to Churchill's announcement of a plan, later dropped, to land American airborne troops in Rome and of a new type German bomb reported to be in use in the Mediterranean.

The director said this information was withheld from the American and British public for reasons of security and that the Prime Minister, in making the disclosure, overrode his own government's policy.

Soldiers' Statements

Referring to a recent statement by U.S. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (Republican) of Massachusetts that soldiers with whom he talked while on a tour of war theaters thought reports of their operations were too optimistic, Davis said:

"'I believe the Senator's statements are more applicable to the Pacific theater and particularly to the infantry there, who feel that they are not getting proper recognition of their services.

"I have talked to Senator Lodge and to the War Department about this and I think that as a result of Senator Lodge's trip, the infantry is going to get a much better break in the news from now on."

Davis said that, on the whole, the Navy was less inclined than the Army to release news, though he said this was not the fault of Secretary of the Navy Knox or of the Navy Department.

Navy Tradition

"It is an ingrained tradition of the Navy to keep its mouth shut," Davis said, "and after 16 months of trying to get information from them, I can tell you it's a pretty hard job."

Davis declared the best handling of news had come from the Mediterranean theater under the command of Genneral Eisenhower and that the flow of news from other theaters would be improved if the commanding officers were "indoctrinated and educated" in evaluating the news and making it available."

Release of news in the Southwest Pacific and in the Aleutians, both of which theaters are under Navy command, has been less satisfactory, Davis said.

Georgia Sheriff Gets Three Years For Negro's Death

Albany, Ga., Oct. 7 (AP).—Sheriff M. Claude Screws of Baker County was convicted today by a United States District Court Jury of violating Civil Liberties Statutes in the bludgeon death of a Negro prisoner, and Judge Bascom Deaver sentenced him to three years imprisonment and fined him $1000.

Convicted and similarly sentenced with Screws were Jim Bob Kelley, a specal deputy, and Frank Edward Jones, former Newton, Ga., policeman.

Judge Deaver sentenced Kelley and Jones to 1-year and a $1000 fine on the count charging deprivation of civil rights, and to 2-years imprisonment on the conspiracy count—the sentences to be served consecutively. Indictment of the three followed the death January 30, of Robert Hall, a Negro, arrested on a charge of stealing an automobile tire.

Henderson Predicts Roosevelt's Election

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Leon Henderson, former head of the Office of Price Administration, says that President Roosevelt will be reelected for a fourth term in 1944 along with a Republican House and a Democratic Senate.

He made his prediction last night in answer to a question put to him after he finished speaking at New York University's School of Education.

It's a Fast One

Many Seek Data on New Keyboard

The modern answer to the prayers of stenographic maidens appeared yesterday to be the new typewriter keyboard now in limited use at the Navy Department.

Speeding up typing by approximately 35 per cent, the new keyboard, which was perfected over a period of years as the result of tests of some 640 keyboard changes, also reduces stenographic fatigue, reduces errors and eliminates thousands of useless motions.

Dozens of stenographers, as well as many efficiency seeking departments of the Federal Government, called the Navy Department to learn more about the system.

Navy spokesmen made clear, however, that the Navy interest in the new method is experimental, pointing out that it is a private invention of Lieut. Comdr. August Dvorak.

Reduces Motions

"The system eliminates awkward combinations, and reduces to scientific minimum motions hands and fingers must make to type out given work," Mrs. Thelma P. McCarty, who teaches the new method, said.

Admitting she was biased in favor of the Dvorak keyboard, Mrs. McCarty, who is regarded as an expert on typing aptitudes, went on:

"Characters are placed in the positions most convenient to the more adept index and second and third fingers of the hands.

"On the old board the word 'exaggeration,' for example, can be written only by the left hand. On the new board the letter distribution is equally divided, there being five letters stroked by the right hand and five with the left."

One girl, Mrs. McCarty said, now is typing 108 words a minute with consummate ease on the Dvorak board after six weeks of training, the average time required for adaptation from the old system to the new. When she started she produced a maximum of 65 words under the old system.

Running her own test over 24 typing hours, Mrs. McCarty found she was writing 45 words a minute without previous practice on the machine.

"Surprisingly enough," she said, "I found no conflict between finger patterns acquired over years of orthodox key stroking and those expressed in the Dvorak method."

180 Not Practicable

Speed of 180 words a minute revealed in private demonstration is not practicable in everyday work, Commander Dvorak said.

"It merely tends to establish the merit of the new keyboard over the old."

Prior to development of the new board 20 attempts failed to simplify typing, it was learned.

The failures were attributable to fact that experimenters were not sufficiently familiar with English word structures and frequency of occurrence to undertake a permanent change in board design, Dvorak held.

"It was necessary to know what words occur most frequently, in what sequences they occur and how the letters relate themselves in words and frequencies," he said.

Chandler Hears Of Jap Cruelty to American Soldier

By the Associated Press

Reports that Japanese had wantonly operated on an unwounded, captured American soldier without the use of an anaesthetic were heard in New Guinea by Senator Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky when he and other members of a Senate inspection committee paused there on their recent 'round-the-world flight.

Telling reporters about it yesterday, Chandler conceded that the account had not been officially verified, "but the soldiers were saying the Japs slip him open just to see what made him tick."

The Senator said, General MacArthur knew of several authenticated atrocities committed by the Japanese, and was keeping the names of the perpetrators on file so they can be called to account after the war.

Former Post Photographer Sees First Lady in So. Pacific

Mrs. William Schlossenberg of 20 14th st. ne., has the word of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt that her son, Staff Sergt. Irving Schlossenberg, a Marine Corps combat correspondent, is well and happy at his assignment between Pearl Harbor and the Southwest Pacific war zone.

Schlossenberg

The First Lady wrote the mother from Poughkeepsie, N. Y., that "I saw your son, Staff Sergt. Irving, while on my trip to the Southwest Pacific. I thought you would like to know he looked very well."

Irving joined the Marines in May of last year. Ninety days later he left for Pearl Harbor where he has been stationed since, although he makes frequent trips to the Southwest Pacific battle front. He is 25. A native of Baltimore he was brought here when 1 year old. Besides his parents, there is a sister, Shirley, and a brother, Sidney, younger, of the Navy, and an older brother, Jerry.

Irving got his training for Combat Correspondent on The Washington Post, where he was a photographer for approximately four years after serving as an office boy. He is a graduate of Eastern High School.

Chinese Actress Tells of Escape From Hongkong

By the Associated Press

Bryn Mawr, Pa., Oct. 7.—The "Helen Hayes of China" put on the best act of her career when she disguised as an old Buddhist and escaped from Jap-occupied Hongkong to Chungking in 40 days of constant terror, neat maneuvering and "just good luck."

Pretty, 25-year-old Yung Wang, whose successful movies caused Pearl Buck to compare her with one of America's first ladies of the stage, told today in the deanery of Bryn Mawr College, where she is now a student, how she was clubbed by Japs and how she once rowed in a fishing barge past a Japanese-held island where one inadvertent sound would have meant death.

At Bryn Mawr, Miss Wang, sponsored by her government and the Bryn Mawr College Chinese scholarship fund, is studying our language and literature.

800 Children to Collect Paper

Eight hundred school children directed by area chairmen will participate tomorrow in a whirlwind paper salvage collection drive in northwest Washington.

Using 60 trucks donated by business firms and the Army, the collectors hope to reach approximately 120,000 dwellings before 3 p. m. The D. C. salvage committee estimated the northwest represents two-thirds of the source of salvage paper.

Residents of the area are being asked by block workers to bind all waste newspaper, magazines and corrugated boxes into bundles and to place them at their front doors. Apartment house residents were asked to put the salvage at the building entrance.

Pershing Visits Two Grandsons

Gen. John J. Pershing made one of his rare public appearances yesterday. It lasted just long enough for him to leave an automobile under the portico of the Carlton Hotel, enter a revolving door, stalk briskly through the lobby and enter an elevator.

Behind him he left a few passers-by and lobby loungers with knitted brows and wondering eyes.

"That was Pershing," said a man. "I'd know him anywhere."

The General held a private levee for his two grandsons, Richard Warren, one year old and John Warren, 2½, in the suite of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. F. Warren Pershing, who brought the babies from New York.

He asked a few questions of Mrs. Pershing, wife of Capt. F. Warren Pershing, now on war assignment, and took his leave, accompanied by his aide, Col. George E. Adamson.

Mrs. Pershing described the No. 1 American general as "looking extremely well" and said he seemed happy at seeing his grandsons.

Chinese Forces Drive Japs Back From East Front

Chungking, Oct. 7 (AP).—Chinese forces, counterattacking against a new Japanese offensive on the East China Front, have sent the invaders reeling back from a number of newly captured points, front line dispatches said today.

The Chinese were reported closing in on Suancheng and Kwangteh, 60 and 90 miles, respectively, from the former capital of Nanking.

A Japanese column in Kwangteh sector, dispatches said, was falling back in disorderly retreat. A Japanese force occupying a village near Suancheng was reported encircled and being pounded mercilessly by the Chinese.

A Chinese communique said later that Suancheng, Kwangteh and Siaofeng were under direct Chinese attack.

Tokyo to 'Free' Philippines Oct. 14

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—The Tokyo radio announced today that the Philippines would become an "independent" country within the Japanese "co-prosperity sphere" October 14 and Berlin said Tagalog is the official language of the new state. English has been the official language in the islands since 1913.

Tokyo's announcement concerning "freedom" for the Philippines effective October 14, followed by only a few hours President Roosevelt's special message to the Congress in Washington proposing a proclamation of independence for the islands as soon as feasible.
